The course targeted new employees, those intend to get married and indebted people enabling them to spend wisely.

The two-day workshop was held at Excellence Centre for Training and Consulting of Doha Institute for Graduate Studies on July 9 and 10.

The financial awareness course in line with Qatar National Vision 2030 aims to achieve sustainable development and decent living for its people by educating participants (male and female) on how to save resources.

It also provides training on savings policies and rationalising spending to achieve financial sustainability and spreading the culture of financial awareness in society in a very attractive way.

The first training course, presented by Head of the Training and Programme Development Department at the Centre of Excellence for Training and Consulting Dr. Mona Babi, focused on financial awareness.

The course covered several topics, including a documentary film entitled: "Why don't I spend well?" the concept and nature of correct spending, the financial age of a person, the skills of setting a personal budget, and strategies for prioritising monthly purchases, the successful equation: saving versus spending, the twelve skills for saving, and the eight skills for spending, practical training through a proven and successful way, and a realistic application (your white penny

She stressed financial awareness is one of the most important topics raised today in most developed countries to preserve resources that will achieve financial sustainability and ensure decent life in the society.

Babi urged the three target groups — people in debt, those intend to get married, and new employees, in addition to university students — to practise the best financial policies for a happy life.

A social guidance consultant at the Ministry of Social Development and Family Hessa Al Dhiyab stressed the value of preserving the family's capabilities, which comes through wise spending and planning for household expenditures.

She added that everyone is required to have the necessary skills and knowledge about the best practices to achieve financial balance in life, and to work to help future generations to live within a rationalisation framework.

Following the directive of Minister of Social Development and Family H E Maryam bint Ali bin Nasser Al Misnad, financial awareness programme Aazim was launched with the support of Social and Sport Contribution Fund (DAAM).

The programme aims at enhancing the awareness of Qatari families and youth about the importance of optimal planning, spending and saving, and avoiding debt for luxury.

This project comes within a comprehensive strategy through which the Ministry seeks to encourage Qatari society to produce, away from irresponsible consumerism.

This is in addition to preparing future generations to rely on diverse sources of income that are compatible with global changes and preserve the capabilities of the family and society.

The Ministry of Social Development and Family through the Aazim programme seeks to build financial awareness based on lofty Islamic values in spending and to use integrated models and means to manage financial life, which has been greatly affected by global economic transformations.

The initiative aims at keeping young people and new families from unnecessary consumerism for luxury by building a conscious and sustainable society that guarantees future generations equal opportunities for prosperity and sustainability.

Qatar Calendar House astronomical team observes Milky Way, Andromeda Galaxy

MARIVIE ALABANZA THE PENINSULA

DOHA: The Qatar Calendar House (QCH) astronomical observation team and astrophotographers recently observed the Orion Arm of the Milky Way Galaxy from the Sudainthile region, south of Qatar.

The team also viewed the Andromeda Galaxy and witnessed numerous meteor showers and star constellations during their observation.

"On Thursday late night, the team travelled about 70 minutes from Doha to the Sudainthile area to witness the peak visibility of the galaxy," Doha-based astrophotographer Ahmed Raslan told The Peninsula.

"My colleague Ali Abo Ras organised the event with the support of Dr. Bashir Marzouq, an astronomical expert at QCH who joined us during the observation," he said.

Raslan shared that the team was able to observe the Orion Arm of the Milky Way, the galaxy's centre, multiple meteor showers, the Andromeda Galaxy, and summer star constellations. The event provided an opportunity for enthusiasts to gather and observe celestial phenomena under expert guidance. Participants enjoyed viewing celestial objects both with the naked eye and through astronomical instruments.

He added that such observation events are regularly organised in the country. "There are always monthly events either by QCH or other astronomy enthusiasts. QCH has its winter camp next to Sudainthile from September to April every year."

Raslan noted that the current period offers optimal conditions for observing the Milky Way in the early morning sky. During summer, the galactic centre and parts of the Orion Arm can be seen from locations free of light pollution.

When asked about upcoming observation events, Raslan said, "Yes, we have another event at the end of this Hijri month, as the moon will not be shining, making the night dark enough for clear observation."

THE PENINSULA

DOHA: The Abdullah Bin Hamad Al Attiyah International Foundation for Energy and Sustainable Development and the University of Doha for Science and Technology (UDST) have embarked on a significant partnership by signing a memorandum of understanding.

This collaboration signals the commitment of both organisations to the development of future energy and sustainability leaders. It aims to bolster research, education, and dialogue in the fields of energy, sustainability, and climate change, while fostering the enhancement of constructive contribution to corporate social responsibility, in line with Qatar National Vision 2030.

H E Abdullah bin Hamad Al Attiyah, Chairman of the Al Attiyah Foundation, and Dr. Salem Al Naemi, President of UDST, ratified the agreement during signing it lately. Al Attiyah expressed his satisfaction at the collaboration, stating: "I am delighted to formalise the cooperation agreement between the Al Attiyah Foundation and UDST. This agreement underscores our firm belief in the significance of collaborative efforts and our confidence in the university to be a worthy partner in our shared vision to nurture the youth of Qatar and develop future leaders in the areas of energy, climate change, and sustainability." He further emphasised, "this partnership will serve as a platform for launching joint research and studies, as well as exchange of information, knowledge and experiences." Dr. Salem Al Naemi, said: "As a national university, energy and sustainability are key pillars of our strategy, both in research and in educating a generation that is knowledgeable, skilled, and committed to achieving Qatar's National Vision. This MoU will facilitate knowledge exchange, establish a strong foundation for collaboration, and pave the way for significant achievements."

QRDI Council announces Qatar-UK collaboration on AI

THE PENINSULA

DOHA: Qatar Research, Development, and Innovation (QRDI) Council, in partnership with the British Embassy in Doha, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs (MoFA), and the AI Committee of the Ministry of Communications and Information Technology (MCIT), has announced a call for project proposals under the Gulf Strategy Fund (GSF) 2024-2025, scoping project on Qatar-UK Collaboration on Artificial Intelligence (AI). Submissions are due by August 12, 2024.

Proposals should aim to identify and scope practical and ambitious ways to enhance Qatar-UK cooperation, supporting both countries' respective AI and critical technologies strategies.

Eng. Omar Al Ansari, QRDI Council's Secretary-General, said: "This initiative aims to advance bilateral cooperation in AI, leveraging both countries' combined expertise and initiatives like Qatar's Digital Vision 2030 and the UK's significant investments in AI research and development. Working on this project in partnership with MoFA and MCIT as well as British Embassy in Doha will be beneficial for strengthening the bilateral relationship between RDI communities in Qatar and the UK and facilitate the exchange of experience and knowledge to achieve our common goals." The project is set to run from September 2024 to March 2025, with funds ranging from £50,000 to £80,000, led by the British Embassy in Doha and co-designed with QRDI Council, MoFA, and MCIT's AI Committee.

Focusing on building and scaling AI ecosystems, as well as enhancing the bilateral relationships between Qatar and UK, the project aims to utilise local RDI talent in Qatar, by encouraging the awarded implementers to include Qatari graduates to support their professional development and analyse Qatar-UK collaboration opportunities to launch AI-enabled companies and integrate AI into existing enterprises.

Qatar Foundation spearheads drive for sustainability with strategic initiatives

"These key initiatives underscore the foundation's dedication to fostering a culture of sustainability and environmental stewardship within the country," said Dr. Bermudez.

"Education for Sustainable Development lies at the core of Qatar Foundation's sustainability agenda, with a focus on integrating sustainability principles into educational institutions and programmes. By educating students about environmental conservation, social responsibility, and sustainable practices, the foundation cultivates a generation of environmentally conscious individuals poised to drive sustainability efforts in Qatar," she added.

leadership in Qatar, with several entities at the forefront of driving the nation's environmental objectives forward. QEERI is a pioneer in cutting-edge research related to environmental sustainability and renewable energy technologies. Through its vital work, QEERI plays a significant role in developing sustainable solutions to environmental challenges, such as water scarcity, waste management, air pollution, coastal degradation and climate change impacts. Amid these environmental challenges, Qatar grapples with one of the highest per capita carbon footprints globally, primarily attributed to its heavy reliance on natural gas for energy production and industrial activities," said Dr. Bermudez.

She added, "R&D at QEERI solar energy projects, energy conservation programs, and emission reduction strategies are pivotal towards reducing Qatar's carbon footprint and align with global efforts to combat climate change." Other prominent initiatives by Qatar Foundation are the World Innovation Summit for Health (WISH), which advocates for sustainable healthcare practices and policies; and Qatar Science & Technology Park (QSTP) which supports startups and companies focused on sustainable technologies, clean energy solutions, and environmental conservation efforts contributes significantly to driving sustainable economic growth in Qatar. "In addition to QEERI, WISH, and QSTP, Qatar Foundation's Education City campus hosts various research centers and institutions (like Earthna) dedicated to sustainability-related research areas. These centers focus on critical topics such as water security, urban development, environmental conservation, and renewable energy, generating valuable knowledge and innovative solutions to tackle Qatar's sustainability challenges effectively," said Dr. Bermudez.

"Through their commitment to research, innovation, and the implementation of sustainability initiatives, these entities are instrumental in paving the way for a more sustainable future in Qatar, in alignment with the country's broader sustainability objectives and aspirations," said Dr. Bermudez.

In line with its commitment to renewable energy, Qatar Foundation has embarked on solar energy projects to promote clean energy sources and reduce carbon emissions; green building practices feature prominently in Qatar Foundation's development projects, emphasizing sustainable and energy-efficient building designs that minimize environmental impact and promote resource conservation; and sustainable transportation is another key focus area for Qatar Foundation, advocating for eco-friendly commuting options such as cycling, carpooling, and public transportation to reduce traffic congestion and air pollution on its campuses.

Qatar Foundation also actively engages in environmental awareness campaigns, workshops, and events to educate the community about sustainability issues, environmental conservation, and the significance of adopting eco-friendly practices in daily life.

"Collectively, these initiatives underscore Qatar Foundation's unwavering commitment to advancing sustainability goals in Qatar and fostering a culture of environmental responsibility and stewardship. Through its multifaceted approach encompassing education, renewable energy, green building practices, sustainable transportation, and environmental awareness, the foundation paves the way for a more sustainable and environmentally conscious society in Qatar," said Dr. Bermudez.

She also emphasized that Qatar Foundation is an example of sustainability

Heavy battles in Gaza City on eve of new truce talks

GAZA STRIP: Israeli forces in war-ravaged Gaza City pushed on with a major offensive yesterday that has again displaced Palestinian.

Troops, tanks and fighter jets swooped on Gaza's biggest urban area on the eve of new contacts in Qatar aiming for an eventual hostage-prisoner exchange and a truce in the war raging into its 10th month.

CIA director William Burns and Israel's Mossad chief David Barnea are due to travel to Qatar today, after Burns held talks with Egypt's President Abdel Fattah Al Sisi in Cairo.

Hamas, whose October 7 attack triggered the war, has accused Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu of deliberately escalating fighting in Gaza City and Rafah in the territory's south, to thwart an agreement.

The Islamist group's political chief Ismail Haniyeh said he had made "urgent contact" with mediators, warning that the "catastrophic consequences" of the latest battles could "reset the negotiation process to square one".

Hamas's armed wing, the Ezzedine Al Qassam Brigades,

Hamas has accused Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu of deliberately escalating fighting in Gaza City and Rafah in the territory's south, to thwart an agreement.

described the fighting in Gaza City in recent days as "the most intense in months".

The fighters were fighting with rockets, mortars and explosives, it said.

After almost two weeks of battles in Gaza City's eastern Shujaiyah district, Israeli forces have extended the fighting into the city's east, west and south.

Residents reported helicopter strikes, "explosions and numerous gun battles" in the city's southwest.

Israel's military said it was pursuing Palestinian fighters in Gaza City, six months after it said it had dismantled Hamas's "military framework" in the territory's north.

Aircraft struck the city as troops were engaged in "close-quarters combat", seizing weapons and destroying tunnels, the military said, reporting "dozens" of militants killed.

The United Nations said tens of thousands of civilians have been affected by the surge in fighting since the first of three evacuation orders for Gaza City was declared on June 27.

Thousands were seen marching down dusty roads past bombed-out buildings, with mothers carrying babies and others packing belongings onto donkey carts.

The UN Human Rights Office said it was "appalled" at the way civilians, many of whom have been displaced multiple times, have been ordered to head to areas where "military operations are ongoing and where civilians continue to be killed and injured".

Gaza City residents have now been told to move south to Deir Al Balah, which the UN office said "is already seriously overcrowded" with displaced Palestinians.

The war started with Hamas's October 7 attack on southern Israel. The fighters seized 251 hostages, 116 of whom remain in Gaza, including 42 the military says are dead.

Israel responded with a military offensive that has killed at least 38,243 people in Gaza, also mostly civilians.

The toll includes at least 50 killed over the past 24 hours, said a ministry statement yesterday.

Qatar and Egypt, supported by the United States, have been engaged in months of behind-the-scenes contacts to start truce talks and organise an exchange of hostages for Palestinian prisoners held in Israeli jails. Hamas has signalled that it would drop its insistence on a "complete" ceasefire — which Israel had repeatedly rejected — as a condition for starting talks.

Netanyahu's has set out conditions for talks, including that "any deal will allow Israel to return and fight until all the goals of the war are achieved", including the destruction of Hamas.

As the Gaza war has raged on, Israel has also exchanged regular cross-border fire with Lebanon's Hezbollah, allies of Hamas, heightening fears of an all-out war.

Hezbollah yesterday released a video showing aerial surveillance footage it said was taken over intelligence and military positions in the Israeli-annexed Syrian Golan Heights.

The release came after an Israeli strike killed a senior Hezbollah commander last week. The group's chief Hassan Nasrallah was expected to make a televised address Wednesday at an event commemorating the slain fighter.

Israeli Foreign Minister Israel Katz told Nasrallah on social media to "stop the threats and violence", and "withdraw" Hezbollah forces from the border area, in line with a 2006 UN Security Council resolution that ended their latest major war. — AFP

UN experts say Gaza children dying in Israel's 'starvation campaign'

GENEVA: UN rights experts yesterday accused Israel of carrying out a "targeted starvation campaign" that has resulted in the deaths of children in Gaza.

"Israel's intentional and targeted starvation campaign against the Palestinian people is a form of genocidal violence and has resulted in famine across all of Gaza," 10 independent United Nations experts said in a statement.

The UN has not officially declared a famine in the Gaza Strip. But the experts, including the UN special rapporteur on the right to food Michael Fakhri, insisted there was no denying famine was under way.

"Thirty-four Palestinians have died from malnutrition since 7 October, the majority being children," said the experts, who are appointed by the UN Human Rights Council, but who do not speak on behalf of the United Nations.

The UN experts listed three children who had recently died "from malnutrition", after a number of others were said to have starved to death in northern Gaza earlier this year. Six-month-old Fayed Ataya and 13-year-old Abdulaqader Al Serhi had died on May 30 and June 1 at Gaza's Al Aqsa Hospital, while nine-year-old Ahmad Abu Reida died on June 3 in the tent sheltering his displaced family in Khan Yunis, they said.

"With the death of these children from starvation despite medical treatment in central Gaza, there is no doubt that famine has spread from northern Gaza into central and southern Gaza," they said.

The experts decried that the world had not done more to avert this disaster.

"When a two-month-old baby and 10-year-old Yazan Al Kafarnah died of hunger on February 24 and March 4 respectively, this confirmed that famine had struck northern Gaza," they said. "The whole world should have intervened earlier to stop Israel's genocidal starvation campaign and prevented these deaths."

Sudan army chief hosts Ethiopia PM

President of Sudan's Transitional Sovereignty Council General Abdel Fattah Al Burhan (right) welcomes Ethiopia's Prime Minister Abiy Ahmed during an official visit in Port Sudan yesterday. (AFP)

PORT SUDAN: Sudan's de facto leader Abdel Fattah Al Burhan, who has led the army in a war against paramilitaries for over a year yesterday hosted Ethiopian prime minister Abiy Ahmed.

Ahmed's visit to the Red Sea coastal town of Port Sudan — currently the seat of the army-aligned government — is the highest-level state visit since the war began between the army and the paramilitary Rapid Support Forces in April 2023.

"It is a testament to the depth of relations" between the two countries, Sudan's ruling Transitional Sovereignty Council said in a statement. In a closed-door meeting, Burhan briefed Ahmed on the "crimes and atrocities" committed by the RSF as part of the "terrorist militia's rebellion against the state and its institutions," his council said.

According to the Ethiopian prime minister's office, yesterday's meeting comes in the context of Ahmed's "commitment to finding sustainable solutions for Sudan's stability".

The visit comes as the African Union, which is headquartered in Addis Ababa, seeks to restart truce talks between Burhan and his former deputy, RSF commander Mohamed Hamdan Daglo.

Burhan's army camp has so far largely shunned East African mediation attempts, accusing regional leaders of siding with "the terrorist militia".

The meeting also comes two days after Egyptian President Abdel Fattah Al Sisi — Ahmed's regional rival — hosted Sudanese civilian and political leaders, including key members of Burhan's government, for talks on ending the war.

Mediation efforts, including by the United States and Saudi Arabia, have repeatedly floundered while the rival generals vie for tactical advantage.

The conflict in the country of 48 million people has so far killed tens of thousands of people, with some estimates placing the death toll as high as 150,000, according to US envoy to Sudan Tom Perriello.

It has also forced nearly 10 million people to flee both internally and across borders, decimating Sudan's already fragile infrastructure and healthcare system and pushed the impoverished country to the brink of famine. — AFP

Liberia's President Boakai takes 40 percent pay cut

MONROVIA: Liberia's President Joseph Boakai will cut his salary by 40 percent, a move he says is aimed at "setting a precedent for responsible governance" in the West African country battling poverty and corruption.

Boakai was sworn in for a six-year term in January and has pledged to improve living conditions for Liberians, tackle widespread corruption and uphold the rule of law.

The president's voluntary pay cut reflects a "determination to lead by example in strengthening government accountability and demonstrating solidarity with the people of the nation", a statement from the presidency said.

Liberia is one of the poorest countries in the world, where more than half of the population lives in poverty, according to a 2023 World Bank report.

The country also ranks 145th out of 180 on Transparency International's 2023 Corruption Perceptions Index. — AFP

Stormy weather wreaks havoc in South Africa's Western Cape

JOHANNESBURG: Strong winds and heavy rains have damaged buildings and left thousands of people homeless in South Africa, authorities said, as weather services warned yesterday that more bad weather was coming.

The Cape Town region has been battered by several cold fronts over the past few days, with mountainous areas experiencing rare heavy snowfalls.

The Western Cape government said 82 schools were damaged, forcing five to remain closed on yesterday. In some cases, wind gusts blew away roof sheeting.

Over the weekend, almost 4,000 people were left homeless as strong winds destroyed about 1,000 homes and other structures in the impoverished township of Khayelitsha.

Localised flooding, fallen trees, electricity outages and road closures were reported across the province, authorities said.

The South African Maritime Safety Authority (SAMSA) said 18 crew members of a cargo ship were rescued on Monday after they were forced to abandon their vessel as it listing severely in the rough seas.

The seafarers, all Filipino nationals, were found in a life raft off South Africa's Atlantic coast and recovered by two nearby cargo vessels, it said.

The South African Weather Service (SAWS) said more "disruptive rain leading to flooding and possible mudslides" was expected to hit the province today and will continue tomorrow. — AFP

Elephants trample Spanish tourist to death in South Africa

CAPE TOWN: Elephants trampled to death a Spanish tourist at a South African wildlife reserve after he left his vehicle and approached a herd to take photographs, police and local government authorities said yesterday.

The 43-year-old man was killed on Sunday at Pilanesberg National Park in North West province, about 180km from Johannesburg, police said.

The elephant herd included young calves. Wildlife experts often warn that elephants are especially protective of their young and can react aggressively to a perceived threat. Police said the man's fiancée and two other women, all from Johannesburg, were also in the vehicle and unharmed.

Piet Nel, acting chief conservation officer for the North West Parks and Tourism Board, said guests at Pilanesberg are told they are not allowed to leave their vehicles while driving through the park and must sign forms showing they understand the rules.

"In some cases, people are oblivious to the dangers in the parks," Nel said. "We must remember that you are entering a wild area." Elephants killed two American tourists this year in separate attacks in the southern African nation of Zambia. — AP

E Guinea ex-minister held for calling leader 'demon' freed

MALABO: Former Equatorial Guinea justice minister Ruben Maye Nsue Mangue, imprisoned since August 2022 for calling the oil-rich country's authoritarian leader a "demon", has been released following a presidential amnesty.

Mangue, also a pastor, told AFP on Monday that he had to undergo a thorough health check but said he was doing well and had not been "tortured in prison".

"I am free," he told AFP over the telephone, following Friday's amnesty.

He had been arrested over an audio recording that went viral on WhatsApp for calling the central African's nation's leader Teodoro Obiang Nguema Mbasogo a "demon... sequestering his people" while calling for a national dialogue.

"I did not receive a lawyer's visit, I did not go on trial, I was in preventive detention," Mangue said.

In November 2022, at the age of 80, Obiang won a sixth term with an official 94.9 percent of the vote, prompting the United States to voice "serious doubts" over the results.

Human rights groups regularly accuse him of widespread abuses including arbitrary detentions, disappearances and torture. — AFP

'Terrible massacre'

YESTERDAY was another devastating day in the ongoing brutal assault on the Gaza Strip by the Israeli occupation forces. In the fourth strike in four days on a school used to shelter displaced Palestinians 29 people lost their lives when Al Awda school in Abasan, near the southern city of Khan Younis, was hit by the Israeli forces. According to the government media office, the majority of those who lost their lives in the "terrible massacre" were children and women who had taken shelter there from the ongoing war on Gaza.

Scores of people were killed and injured in the earlier attacks on schools daily starting from Saturday when an Israeli strike hit the UN-run Al Jawni school in Nuseirat, central Gaza, killing 16 people. The UN agency for Palestinian refugees (UNRWA) said 2,000 people were sheltering there at the time. On Sunday Holy Family school in Gaza City where hundreds of people were sheltered was hit killing four people. On Monday it was the turn of UNRWA-run school in Nuseirat.

These mindless attacks on civilians who had to flee home and take shelter in schools and camps are a clear violation of all international laws and human rights conventions. It is very disheartening that the international community is not coming together strongly against these barbaric acts by Israel.

The ongoing attacks have also made entry of aid into the Strip next to impossible forcing UN human rights experts to announce that famine has spread throughout Gaza.

In a statement, the UN experts considered that the death of thousands of children in the Gaza Strip due to malnutrition and dehydration confirms the spread of famine, describing the starvation campaign carried out by the Israeli entity against the Palestinian people as "a form of genocide, and it has caused famine."

They also urged the international community to give priority to delivering aid to Gaza by land and to end the Israeli siege on the Strip. UNRWA also reported that nearly 300,000 of its students in the Gaza Strip have remained out of school for 9 months. As hospitals and school buildings have been bombed to dust, it will take a mammoth effort to build back the basic infrastructure.

It has become vitally important to reach a permanent ceasefire so that the killing of innocents stops at once. It is also important to look through the rubble for those who succumbed to the destruction. A truce is also important for the aid distribution to the displaced millions who are struggling to get the essentials. Let's hope that the ceasefire talks have a positive outcome as the tears have run dry.

Gaza's 'safe zone' of horror

GHADA AGEEL — AL JAZEERA

AL-MAWASI used to be a rare beauty spot on the otherwise overcrowded coast of the Gaza Strip. Stretching for about 12km (7.5 miles) between Khan Younis and Rafah, it was one of the most magnificent beach areas, with rolling golden sand dunes. Its beautiful landscape, breathtaking sunsets and a calming sea breeze made it a popular spot for families.

But al-Mawasi, the serene beach spot, is no more. Israel's genocide has transformed it from an area of recreation to an area of endless horror.

In late October, as Israeli planes rained bombs and missiles all across the Gaza Strip, the Israeli occupation forces (IOF) designated al-Mawasi as "a safe area" where Palestinian civilians fleeing Israeli aggression could supposedly find safety. Israeli commanders would later claim that they considered it a "permanent safe zone".

Although there was hardly any infrastructure in al-Mawasi and humanitarian agencies warned that it was not suitable for a displacement camp, hundreds of thousands of Palestinians from Gaza City, Khan Younis, my hometown, and later Rafah streamed to it, having no other place to go. Many set up improvised shelters with sheets of plastic or blankets, barely able to protect the dignity of their families. Life in the camp was miserable, with starvation, disease and thirst plaguing its inhabitants.

Soon it became clear that the "permanent safe zone" was not safe at all.

In February, the IOF attacked al-Mawasi, including a safe house for Doctors Without Borders (MSF) staff and family members, killing two and injuring six, including women and children.

In late May, the IOF bombed the area again, killing at least 21 Palestinians, including 12 women. The attack came just days after the International Court of Justice (ICJ) ordered Israel to stop its genocidal offensive on Rafah.

On June 21, the IOF attacked al-Mawasi again, killing at least 25 Palestinians and wounding 50. These are just a few examples of the IOF's constant attacks, to which Western media has paid little attention and on which it has offered little detail beyond the Israeli denials. On June 27, I woke up to a message from a doctor in my family. My heart sank as I read his description of yet another attack on al-Mawasi. This time, the IOF had targeted al-Shakush and the regional park areas.

"These areas are full of displaced people, encampments of tents, pergola tents, and temporary shelters. People are living on top of each other," read my family member's message. "The tanks entered, without warning, running over a few tents and opening fire indiscriminately. I saw people fleeing in terror. Some managed to grab a few of their personal belongings, while others left with nothing – running for their lives.

"Many lay flat on the ground away from the gunfire. Others took refuge in any available shelter, while some sat in the street, waiting for what seemed like an endless nightmare to end.

"Today, I went to the hospital and saw a large number of injured people from that area," the message continued. "This relentless process of chasing, persecuting, and hunting people from place to place, akin to monsters hunting prey, is beyond my comprehension." The following day, I received the testimony of another doctor, who also had witnessed what happened in al-Shakush.

He was returning from his shift at a hospital when the Israeli tanks began to roll in from different directions, indiscriminately shooting without any warning. He ran to rescue his family, managing to get them out. Fire started, transforming the scene into a living hell.

In the panic, people left all of their belongings and some even their children, for whom they rushed back, as they fled in terror.

On the way and while running, the doctor helped people load the dead and wounded onto donkey carts, but he could not offer any medical help. Like others, he ran for his life and the lives of his family. As soon as they reached what they thought was a safe place, his wife fainted from the terror. The United Nations reported "scores of casualties" and at least 5,000 people displaced by Israel's new assault on al-Mawasi. Medical sources spoke of at least 11 killed and 40 injured.

A few days after the al-Mawasi massacre, on July 1, the scene of devastation and horror shifted to the eastern part of Khan Younis, what used to be one of the most picturesque areas in the Gaza Strip. The towns of Abasan, Bani Suhaila, Khuza'a, and the al-Fukhari neighbourhood, which houses the European Hospital, were ordered to evacuate.

The IOF orders came in the evening, leaving no time for residents to pack their belongings.

Amid the ruins of their destroyed homes and makeshift tents, people faced such immense distress that a relative described the experience as if living through "the day of judgement".

According to the UN, the IOF forced a quarter of a million people to leave Khan Younis. The European Hospital also had to evacuate, with many of its patients transferred by their families on donkey carts to the devastated Nasser Hospital, which was also the scene of a recent massacre.

In the exodus, reminiscent of previous mass displacements of the past nine months, people flocked to al-Mawasi, which was still reeling from the Israeli attacks. Many were actually returning to al-Mawasi, having left weeks earlier for the ruins of their homes in Khan Younis to make space for the stream of people fleeing from Rafah. The return to Khan Younis was prompted by the IOF's own claims that it was safe for fleeing Rafah residents to head there, as well as to al-Mawasi. As with every displacement, people endured the torment of searching for family members – dead or alive – while looking for new temporary shelter and securing water, food, toilets, and other necessities.

My siblings, and their families, also displaced in al-Mawasi since December, described to me the fear-stricken faces of children, women, and men, the sick and the elderly, wandering the streets without direction.

Today, nine out of every 10 Palestinians in Gaza have been forced to flee their homes in search of safety, moving from place to place, tent to tent, only to be attacked and forced to flee again. The entire population of the Gaza Strip, more than half of them children, are being subjected to unimaginable – but all too real – levels of cruelty.

The systematic and constant attacks on Palestinians in the so-called "safe zones", alongside the destruction of their infrastructure, do not make military sense. They appear to be solely aimed at killing and terrorising as many civilians as possible.

My sister told me that now they are all waiting to die and are mentally prepared for any kind of death, "but probably the harshest is to die from oppression".

Yes, Palestinians die from Israeli bombs, from Israeli bullets, but also from the feeling of oppression. It is that unbearable feeling that you have when you witness the ongoing genocide, hour after hour, you know that your and your family's turn is coming and you are unable to stop it. It is the unbearable feeling you have hearing the cries of the wounded dying in agony, seeing children without limbs and knowing you cannot help them. It is the unbearable feeling you have knowing the world has been watching the genocide for nine months and has done nothing to stop it.

Palestinians believe the IOF aims to destroy "al-bashar wa al-hajar wa al-shajar" – the humans, the stones, and the trees – that is, everything. Nine months into this genocide, it is more than evident that this aggression is not against the Palestinian Islamic resistance movement, also known as Hamas. It is a total war against Palestinian existence. This conclusion has been confirmed by human rights experts as well. "This killing is nothing short of the destruction of Palestinian life," South African lawyer Adila Hassim told the ICJ during a hearing on Israel's genocide case in January. The inaction and complicity of the Western world, the lack of proper investigation into these crimes, and the dragging out of procedures at international bodies – including the delay of arrest warrants for Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and Defence Minister Yoav Gallant at the International Criminal Court – reflect a gross disregard for accountability and justice. The deliberate targeting of Palestinian life is not just a blatant violation of international humanitarian law, but an assault on the very foundations of humanitarian principles and human dignity.

Trump's legal woes and self pardoning powers

DR. SHAHER ZAKARIA

If president Trump wins, he will not be able to expunge the conviction from his record. President's can grant pardons for federal crimes, but not for state crimes like this one according to the US Constitution, although this question has fascinated historians, academics, and US Constitutional scholars for a long time.

being a first-time offender. Judge Merchan will consider other factors such as if President Trump poses a risk factor to the public or if letting him free would send a bad message to others that might commit the same crimes in the future. Judge Merchan can issue a lighter sentence such as probation, home confinement, or a conditional discharge. Trump is expected to appeal the verdict which will further the legal process of the case. Moreover, the guilty verdict does not prevent Trump from continuing his bid of getting re-elected to the White House.

If president Trump wins, he will not be able to expunge the conviction from his record. President's can grant pardons for federal crimes, but not for state crimes like this one according to the US Constitution, although this question has fascinated historians, academics, and US Constitutional scholars for a long time.

The US Constitution is vague by nature and Constitutional scholars have disagreed on whether the president's pardoning powers extend to himself. The pardoning power is among the strongest unitary powers that a president has. Generally, US Constitutional scholars have either been restrictive or expansive in their interpretation of the US Constitution. Presidential pardon powers come from Article II, Section 2, Clause 1 of the US Constitution which simply states that the commander in chief "Shall have Power to grant Reprieves and Pardons for Offenses against the United States except in Cases of Impeachment." Convictions brought by states are not considered to be crimes against the nation. The pardoning power of state crimes is up to the governor of the state, which is generally considered to be the 'president' of his/her state. In this case it would be highly unlikely for the former president to be pardoned by the Democratic governor of New York State.

It is important to note that former US presidents have engaged in acts that were beneficial to them. President Trump has appointed his family members to high-ranking White House jobs in a blatant form of nepotism. He also pardoned or commuted the sentences of people for nonviolent drug offenses as well as his political allies such as his former chief strategist Steve Bannon and former campaign manager Paul Manafort. He also issued highly controversial pardons for service members and mercenaries who were accused of committing crimes against humanity. On the other hand, former president Bill Clinton pardoned his own brother, Roger Clinton from drug possession and drug trafficking convictions on his last day in the White House.

President Trump is still facing 57 other felony counts across three open criminal cases, and some of them do involve federal crimes. However, these indictments are likely to be resolved after this year's November presidential elections. The three criminal cases are of local and federal charges in Atlanta and Washington, D.C. alleging the former president conspired to undo the 2020 elections, as well as a federal indictment case in Florida charging him with illegally keeping top-secret records in his house.

Indonesian rescuers search for dozens buried by landslide

JAKARTA: Rescue workers dug through tonnes of mud and rubble yesterday as they searched for dozens of missing people after a landslide hit an unauthorised gold mining area on Indonesia's Sulawesi island, killing at least 23 people.

More than 100 villagers were digging for grains of gold on Sunday in the remote and hilly village of Bone Bolango when tons of mud plunged down the surrounding hills and buried their makeshift camps, said Heriyanto, head of the provincial Search and Rescue Office.

Rescuers recovered more bodies yesterday in the devastated hamlet where the gold mine is located.

"Improved weather allowed us to recover more bodies," said

At least 23 people have been killed in the landslide.

Heriyanto, who goes by a single name like many Indonesians.

According to his office, 66 villagers managed to escape from the landslide, 23 were pulled out alive by rescuers, including 18 with injuries, and 23 bodies were recovered, including three women and a 4-year-old boy. About 35 others were missing, it said.

National Disaster Management Agency spokesperson Abdul Muhari said torrential rains that have pounded the mountainous district since Saturday triggered the landslide and broke an embankment, causing floods up to the roofs of houses in five villages in Bone Bolango, which is part of a mountainous district in Gorontalo province. Nearly 300 houses were affected and more than 1,000 people fled for safety.

Authorities deployed more than 200 rescuers, including police and military personnel, with heavy equipment to search for the dead and missing in a rescue operation that has been hampered by heavy rains, unstable soil, and rugged, forested terrain, said Afifuddin Ilahude, a local rescue official.

"With many missing and some remote areas still unreachable, the death toll is likely to rise," Ilahude said, adding that sniffer dogs were being mobilized in the search.

Philippine fireworks disposal mishap injures 27

MANILA: A batch of suspect fireworks exploded accidentally during their disposal in the southern Philippines, injuring 27 people, most of them explosives experts, police said yesterday.

The blast happened on Monday as a team of police, coast guard, marine and fire personnel disposed of firecrackers retrieved from a nearby warehouse, where an explosion on June 29 killed five people and injured 38 others, in Zamboanga city on Mindanao island.

The fireworks were the third and final batch to be taken from the warehouse to an abandoned government-owned shooting range for a controlled explosion, regional police spokeswoman Lieutenant Colonel Helen Galvez told AFP by telephone.

They had been offloaded from a pick-up truck and were being doused with water when they ignited prematurely. "It was accidental," Galvez said. "It was not intended to be a massive explosion." Twenty members of the disposal team were injured, including six seriously. Seven civilians suffered minor injuries when the blast damaged a dozen houses and other buildings nearby, as well as four vehicles. —AP

PNG minister facing domestic assault charge steps down

WELLINGTON: Papua New Guinea's opposition leader urged the country's premier yesterday to fire the petroleum minister who is stepping down from office as he faces alleged domestic assault charges in Australia.

Police in Australia said Saturday that a 58-year-old man was arrested and charged after a domestic dispute in Sydney after a 31-year-old woman known to him had injuries to her face following an altercation, the statement said. Australian authorities did not name Petroleum Minister Jimmy Maladina as the accused, but his identity was widely reported by news outlets in Papua New Guinea and Australia. Papua New Guinea Prime Minister James Marape said in a written statement Sunday that Maladina "offered to step aside" while he attended to a complaint "as it is heard in court in Australia," without elaborating further on the incident. The premier added he would appoint an acting minister to fill in for the petroleum minister. Still, opposition leader Douglas Tomori urged Marape to sack Maladina or request his outright resignation rather than allow him to step aside temporarily. —AP

Pakistan PM, UN refugee chief discuss situation of Afghan refugees

ISLAMABAD: The head of the UN refugee agency met the Pakistani Prime Minister yesterday to discuss the situation of Afghan refugees living in uncertainty since Islamabad began a crackdown against undocumented refugees last year. Pakistan has long hosted an estimated 1.7 million Afghans, most of whom fled during the 1979-1989 Soviet occupation.

More than half a million others escaped Afghanistan after the Taliban takeover in 2021, with thousands waiting in Pakistan for resettlement in the United States and elsewhere. Since the clampdown started in November, an estimated 600,000 Afghans have returned home. The UN High Commissioner for Refugees, Filippo Grandi, who arrived in Pakistan on Sunday, spent two days meeting Afghan refugees. He posted on social media platform X: "I spent time with Afghan refugees whose resourcefulness is testimony to their strength — and to Pakistan's long hospitality." Grandi added that his visit aimed to "discuss how we can best support both amidst growing challenges." Pakistan's

Prime Minister Shabaz Sharif told the UN refugee agency head that Afghan refugees were treated with "exemplary respect and dignity" despite facing multiple challenges, according to a statement released by his office yesterday. Sharif also urged the international community to "recognize the burden being shouldered by Pakistan while hosting such a large refugee population and demonstrate collective responsibility." The Prime Minister also asked for help from UNHCR to repatriate the refugees in "a safe and dignified" manner. Also Yesterday, Grandi met with Asif Durrani, the country's special representative for Afghanistan. Durrani wrote on X that the two sides "expressed readiness to find a durable solution to the Afghan refugee problem, including their repatriation".

Pakistan had previously said the crackdown targeted those without valid documents regardless of nationality.

UN agencies have decried the forced expulsion of Afghans from Pakistan, saying it could lead to severe human rights violations — including the separation of families and deportation of minors.

Since the crackdown, the neighbouring Taliban-led government said it set up a commission to deal with repatriated nationals and has criticised Islamabad's actions.

Pakistan has also faced a surge in militant attacks on security forces and civilians alike, mostly blamed on Pakistani Taliban — a separate militant group — straining the ties between the two countries.

Malaysia arrests 'Ninja Turtle Gang' members, seizes tortoises

KUALA LUMPUR: Malaysian authorities have arrested six members of an international crime ring known as the "Ninja Turtle Gang" and seized about 200 smuggled tortoises and turtles, a wildlife official said yesterday.

Abdul Kadir Abu Hashim, director-general of Malaysia's wildlife and national parks department, said four Cambodians and two Malaysians were arrested during a July 2 raid on a house in Kuala Lumpur by police and wildlife officials. He said some 200 turtles and tortoises worth an estimated 246,394 ringgit ($52,300) were rescued during the raid, the second seizure in Malaysia in less than a week. Many people across Asia believe that turtles and tortoises bring good luck and prosperity. Abdul Kadir said the six arrested belong to the Ninja Turtle Gang, an international crime ring involved in smuggling the reptiles.

Police and wildlife officials rescued 400 tortoises during an initial raid on June 29 that were meant for sale in Southeast Asia and were worth $805,084 on the black market. Animals rescued in the latest raid included the critically endangered Chinese striped-necked turtle, which is also known as the golden thread turtle, Abdul Kadir said. Other species included the endangered black pond turtle, snapping turtle, sulcata tortoise, leopard tortoise and the red-footed tortoise found throughout South America and the Caribbean islands of Trinidad and Barbados.

"Initial investigations revealed that the reptiles were smuggled from abroad to meet the lucrative pet market." Also discovered were three snakes, four soft-shell turtles, a skink and five frogs. The rescued animals were being kept in a Malaysian wildlife department quarantine centre. The reptiles are illegally brought into Malaysia by road or in suitcases by smugglers aboard commercial flights, Abdul Kadir said last week. Traffic, a wildlife NGO, has said that Southeast Asian countries "function as source, consumer and as entrepôts for wildlife originating from within the region as well as the rest of the world". —AP

Six dead in Tokyo as Japan swelters in heatwave

TOKYO: Six people have died of heatstroke in Tokyo as Japan swelters under a rare rainy season heatwave, prompting authorities to issue a flurry of health warnings.

Over the weekend, the central Shizuoka region became the first in Japan to see the mercury reach 40 degrees Celsius this year, far surpassing the 35-degree threshold classified by weather officials as "extremely hot".

Such severe heat in the middle of Japan's rainy season is "rather rare", caused in part by a strong South Pacific high-pressure system, a weather agency official told AFP.

Temperatures also hit record highs near 40 degrees Celsius on Monday at observation posts in Tokyo and in the southern Wakayama region, according to local media.

The past few days have seen authorities issue heatstroke alerts in much of the country, urging residents to avoid exercising outside and to use air conditioning.

The capital logged three deaths linked to heatstroke on Saturday and three more on Monday, when the mercury hovered around 35 degrees Celsius at midday, according to the city's medical examination office. "Without the AC on, I find it difficult to survive," Tokyo resident Sumiko Yamamoto, 75, told AFP, adding she feels "it's gotten drastically hotter" since last year.

"Through the advice given on TV, I try to stay hydrated as much as possible. Because I'm old, I'm being careful not to collapse," she said. Heatstroke is particularly deadly in Japan, which has the second-oldest population in the world after Monaco. Yamamoto's age puts her in the demographic flagged by health experts as particularly vulnerable to heatstroke, along with infants and those living alone or who are too poor to afford air conditioning.

The Japanese Association for Acute Medicine on Monday warned of the rising death toll from heat exhaustion nationwide, which grew from just a few hundred per year two decades ago to around 1,500 in 2022. The sheer number of fatalities suggests that heatstroke now poses a danger on par with that of "a major natural disaster", the group said, warning against non-essential outings. Tokyo business executive Mikio Nakahara, 67, says the difference between Tokyo 50 years ago and now is stark.

"Tokyo wasn't as hot as it is now," he told AFP.

But these days, "I try to work remotely as much as possible so I don't have to go outside." With ever-hotter summers becoming the norm around the world, tourists like Ainhoa Sanchez, 29, aren't too surprised by Tokyo's temperatures. "So the plan is going sightseeing a little bit. Drinking a lot of liquids. Maybe when we get too hot, we can get into a shop, look around, chill a bit and then go back to the street," she told AFP. —AP

India floods swamp national park, killing six rhinos

GUWAHATI: Devastating floods in India's northeast that have killed scores of people also swamped a national park drowning six threatened rhinos and other wildlife, government officials said yesterday.

Floods have begun to ease, Assam state Chief Minister Himanta Biswa Sarma said in a statement, noting the "water level of the Brahmaputra and its tributaries is below the danger level in most places".

More than 1.8 million people have been affected across 3,000 villages, as well as 72 killed since mid-May, according to state disaster officials. Monsoon rains across South Asia from June to September offer respite from the summer heat and are crucial to replenishing water supplies, but also bring widespread death and destruction.

The intensity of rain and floods has increased in recent years, with experts saying climate change is exacerbating the problem.

As the waters recede, the impact on wildlife from the deluge is also being seen, including in Kaziranga National Park. "Floods have affected humans and animals alike," Sarma said, adding officers had been "working round the clock to aid everyone".

On Monday, Sarma posted a video on social media of a stranded rhino calf, up to its chin in water, saying he had "instructed its immediate rescue". Kaziranga is home to two-thirds of the world's remaining one-horned rhinos, classified as vulnerable on the International Union for Conservation of Nature Red List.

The park has 2,413 rhinos, according to a 2018 count. Wildlife officers said six

Central Asian states hold 'first' war games without Russia or China

ASTANA: Central Asian countries yesterday held joint drills with land, naval and air forces, for the first time without regional powers Russia and China.

Kazakhstan is hosting four other ex-Soviet states for the drills, which a spokesman for Kazakhstan's armed forces told AFP were "the first of their kind".

"All the participants have arrived," the spokesman said.

The exercises are named Birlestik-2024, meaning alliance in Kazakh.

Taking place in the Caspian Sea, they will last until July 17 and involve around 4,000 troops with warships, aviation, artillery and tanks.

Taking part are four Central Asian republics — Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Uzbekistan and Tajikistan, while Turkmenistan is absent.

The Caucasus country of Azerbaijan is also participating, while Russia, traditionally dominant in the area, is fighting in Ukraine.

Kyrgyzstan's defence ministry said that during the drills, troops will "liberate an island captured by terrorists" and "carry out operations to ensure security at sea and to protect infrastructure".

These countries regularly take part in drills with the two most influential major powers in this strategic region: with Russia as part of the Collective Security Treaty Organisation and with China as part of the Shanghai Cooperation Organisation, most recently in 2023 involving 1,500 troops.

After decades of strife, Central Asian countries have recently stepped up cooperation, as major powers have also paid more attention to a region that is rich in raw materials and an important trade route.

All the countries are part of a transport route between China and Europe that bypasses Russia, known as the "Middle Corridor". —AP

Modi tells Putin at Kremlin 'war cannot solve problems'

MOSCOW: Indian Prime Minister Narendra Modi yesterday told President Vladimir Putin that "war cannot solve problems" and urged peace on a trip to Moscow over two years into the Ukraine offensive.

On his first visit since Russia launched its campaign in Ukraine in February 2022, Modi said he and Putin had chatted on a range of issues, adding: "I was happy that on Ukraine, we could both express our views openly and in detail." "When innocent children are murdered, one sees them die, the heart pains and that pain is unbearable," Modi told Putin in comments in Hindi.

"I know that war cannot solve problems, solutions and peace talks can't succeed among bombs, guns, and bullets," the Indian leader added.

"And we need to find a way to peace through dialogue."

Putin thanked Modi for "the attention you pay to the most urgent problems" and said "you are trying to find some ways to solve the Ukrainian crisis, too, of course primarily by peaceful means".

launched a massive barrage across Ukraine that killed at least 38 people and heavily damaged a children's hospital in Kyiv, sparking condemnation from governments in Europe and North America.

On Monday evening Modi was pictured hugging Putin at the Russian president's country residence, where the leaders spent several hours together, according to the Kremlin.

Such warm contact drew condemnation from Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelensky.

He wrote on social media: "It is a huge disappointment and a devastating blow to peace efforts to see the leader of the world's largest democracy hug the world's most bloody criminal in Moscow on such a day." At the Kremlin, Putin hailed India and Russia's "very long-standing friendship" and said they now enjoy a "specially privileged, strategic partnership".

Russia is a vital supplier of cut-price oil and weapons to India, but Moscow's isolation from the West and growing ties with Beijing have impacted its partnership with New Delhi.

Modi is courting closer Western security ties after being returned to power last month as leader of the world's most populous country.

Western powers have in recent years also cultivated stronger relations with India as a hedge against China and its growing influence across the Asia-Pacific, while pressuring New Delhi to distance itself from Russia.

The United States on Monday urged Modi to make clear in his talks with Putin that "any resolution to the conflict in Ukraine must... be one that respects the UN Charter with respect to Ukraine's territorial integrity".

Modi last visited Russia in 2019 and hosted Putin in the Indian capital two years later, weeks before Russia began its offensive against Ukraine.

India has largely shied away from explicit condemnation of Russia ever since and abstained on United Nations resolutions targeting the Kremlin.

But Russia's fight with Ukraine has also had a human cost for India.

New Delhi said in February it was pushing Moscow to return several of its citizens who had signed up for "support jobs" with the Russian military, following reports some had been killed after being forced to fight in Ukraine. Moscow's relationship with China has also been a cause for concern.

Washington and the EU accuse China of selling components and equipment that have strengthened Russia's military industry — allegations Beijing denies. China and India remain intense rivals competing for strategic influence across South Asia. — AFP

UK resolves Rwanda asylum cases after govt drops policy

LONDON: Three asylum seekers who brought court action to block the UK's attempt to send them to Rwanda had their cases resolved yesterday, after the incoming Labour government ditched the policy.

Prime Minister Keir Starmer announced on Saturday that the migrant deportation plan forged by the ousted Conservative government was "dead and buried".

There had already been a spate of legal challenges to the scheme, with the UK Supreme Court in November last year ruling that it was illegal under international law as Rwanda could not be considered a safe country for asylum seekers.

Government lawyer James Eadie told the High Court in London yesterday: "In relation to the three named claimants, these claimants' cases will be fully disposed of and withdrawn subject to the (interior ministry) paying their costs."

The Labour Party said before last Thursday's general election that it would ditch the scheme, which the Tories said would deter huge numbers of migrants trying to get across the Channel to the UK on small boats from northern France.

Sixty-five people were brought ashore on Monday — the first under the new government — taking the total number of arrivals so far this year to 13,639, according to an AFP tally of official figures.

Rwanda, home to 13 million people in Africa's Great Lakes region, claims to be one of the most stable countries on the continent and has drawn praise for its modern infrastructure. But rights groups accuse veteran President Paul Kagame of ruling in a climate of fear, stifling dissent and free speech.

A spokesman for his government said Monday that "Rwanda takes note of the intention of the UK government to terminate the Migration and Economic Development Partnership Agreement".

As part of the deal, the UK has already paid some £240m ($307m) to Rwanda, with a further £50m scheduled to be sent at a later date.

In January, Kagame said the money was "only going to be used if those people will come. If they don't come, we can return the money".

However, he later specified there was "no obligation" to do so. — AFP

Slovak PM back at work two months after shooting

BRATISLAVA: Slovakia's Prime Minister Robert Fico said he had returned to work yesterday, almost two months after a lone gunman had shot him four times on May 15.

The 59-year-old Fico was shot from close range after a government meeting in central Slovakia and underwent two lengthy surgeries in a nearby hospital.

The gunman, identified by Slovak media as 71-year-old poet Juraj Cintula and prosecuted on terrorism charges, is in custody awaiting trial.

Fico leads a three-party coalition of his centrist Smer-SD party, the centrist Hlas and the far-right SNS governing the EU and NATO member of 5.4 million people. Slovak media said the nationalist-leaning Fico, who is often criticised by the EU along with Hungarian counterpart Viktor Orban, came to yesterday's cabinet meeting through a tunnel to avoid journalists.

"Dear progressive liberal media and opposition, I apologise for having survived but I'm back," Fico said on Facebook, posting a picture of himself in his office. When Fico took office last autumn, Slovakia refused to continue military aid to Ukraine, facing a Russian invasion since February 2022. — AFP

Strike call threatens Paris airports' Olympics preparations

PARIS: A dispute between aviation workers and management at the French capital's airports threatens to overshadow years of preparations and a 50m euro investment for visitors and athletes arriving for the Paris Olympics this month.

Unions at state-controlled ADP group, which runs the main Charles de Gaulle airport and its cross-town rival Orly, announced a one-day stoppage on July 17 to press for bigger Olympics bonuses and staff recruitment.

If it continues, the stand-off with management could impact the Games, with athletes set to start arriving en masse from July 18 and hundreds of thousands of ticket holders flying in ahead of the July 26 opening ceremony.

"The fact that we are forced to call for a strike is because of the obstinate refusal of management and in particular the CEO of the company," unions said in a joint statement on Monday.

Along with train stations, Charles de Gaulle and Orly are set to be the main gateways into France for foreign Olympics fans, as well as athletes and equipment.

The ability of ADP's unions to mobilise workers next week is uncertain, however, with a previous stoppage called on May 19 having little effect on operations.

The country's air traffic controllers, despite winning large pay increases last year, went on strike again on April 25, causing thousands of flight cancellations.

Charles de Gaulle and Orly will the first glimpse many foreign visitors and athletes have of the French capital when they arrive for the Games.

As a result, ADP has spent 50 million euros ($54m) upgrading its infrastructure and French authorities are deploying extra resources to make the experience as smooth and safe as possible.

"We know that there are some days that will be really intense and we will maybe have 300,000 travellers in the same day at Charles de Gaulle," Julien Gentile, director of border security forces at Paris's airports, told reporters last week. That number is well above the daily summer average of 200,000 at the airport and is far beyond the record 250,000 daily fliers reached in the summer of 2019.

For the duration of the Games, 250 border posts will be open — 100 more than normal — and they will be staffed almost round-the-clock thanks to 2,000 reinforcements, including from the EU's border force Frontex.

"It's like if your supermarket had all of its tills open from the start of the day to the close," Gentile added.

Automated passport control machines, which can be used by EU travellers, as well as crowd-monitoring technology that alerts managers to the arrival of passengers, are also part of the efforts to avoid bottlenecks.

One of the key challenges for ADP over the Olympic period is managing irregular and sharp spikes in demand.

The busiest days are expected to come after the closing ceremony on August 21 when spectators, officials and most of the 10,000 athletes will head home. — AFP

EU halts Georgia's accession to the bloc, freezes financial aid

TBILISI: Georgia's accession to the European Union has been halted, and some of the bloc's financial support to the South Caucasus country has been frozen after the Georgian authorities adopted a new law that critics feared would curb democratic freedoms, the EU Ambassador in Georgia said yesterday.

According to Paweł

Herczynski, EU leaders made the decision to halt the process during the last summit of the European Council, and it came in the wake of the Georgian authorities adopting the law on "foreign influence" despite weeks of protests.

In addition, a total of 30 million euros ($32.5 million) in financial support, earmarked for Georgia's Defense

Ministry in 2024, has been frozen, Herczynski said at a news conference.

"This is only the first step, there will be other steps. Our direct support to the government of Georgia will be limited, and we will seek to redirect support from the government of Georgia to civil society and the media," he said. — AFP

Bulgaria takes Gazprom to court over supplies

SOFIA: Bulgaria's state-owned gas supplier Bulgargaz said yesterday it was taking Gazprom to court and seeking millions of euros in damages over the Russian company's cut of supplies after its invasion of Ukraine.

Bulgaria, which was almost totally dependent on Russia for its gas, and Poland were the first EU countries that saw their supplies halted after refusing to pay for the gas in rubles as demanded by Moscow in response to Western sanctions.

Two months ago Bulgargaz invited Gazprom to settle the dispute out of court. "As the Russian side did not take any action to resolve the issue out of court, Bulgargaz took the necessary steps to protect the company's interests," it said. — AFP

Italy's state broadcaster criticised for French elections coverage

ROME: Questions over the impartiality of Italian state broadcaster RAI surfaced yesterday, after scarce coverage of France's elections in which an alliance of left-leaning parties defeated the far-right.

A parliamentary supervisory committee for RAI, which is state-owned, has called for the broadcaster's management to explain why only the group's 24-hour news channel, Rainews24, followed the French election results Sunday.

The committee's president Barbara Floridia said it was "completely inconceivable" that RAI on Sunday evening neglected coverage "precisely in the crucial hours of a global event followed by the media all over the world and which found widespread coverage on Italian private TV." On Sunday, France's left-wing New Popular Front came in top in the second round of parliamentary elections, soundly beating Marine Le Pen's far-right National Rally, which had long been expected to win an absolute majority in the National Assembly.

The accusation levelled at RAI comes amid ongoing criticism of the broadcaster, which the opposition's Democratic Party has accused of being a "government megaphone" for the hard-right government of Giorgia Meloni.

As a public broadcaster whose top management is chosen by politicians, the independence of RAI — which has a primetime audience TV share of about 39 percent — has always been an issue of debate.

But insiders say intruders have become more pronounced under Meloni, leader of the far-right Brothers of Italy party, with investigative reporters pushed aside, pro-government commentators promoted and programmes critical of government ministers cancelled or watered down.

RAI journalists held a 24-hour strike in May to defend freedom of the press, with the Usigrai union citing then "the suffocating control over journalistic work, with the attempt to reduce Rai to a megaphone for the government." Flood watch as Beryl sweeps across US

HOUSTON: A flood watch was in place yesterday across multiple US states as tropical depression Beryl lashes the country's south with heavy rain after killing at least four people in Texas.

The US National Hurricane Center (NHC) said Beryl could bring flash flooding "from the lower and mid Mississippi Valley to the Great Lakes" through Wednesday as it sweeps across swathes of the United States.

A tornado is also possible Tuesday across parts of the south, the NHC said in its latest advisory.

Beryl was downgraded Monday evening after hitting Texas as a Category 1 hurricane, causing millions to lose power amid scorching summer heat.

The sprawling city of Houston, home to 2.3 million people, was badly battered early Monday by hurricane-strength winds and flooding, with authorities announcing at least four deaths related to the storm.

Harris County Sheriff Ed Gonzalez said on X that a 53-year-old man and 74-year-old woman had died in separate incidents of trees falling on houses.

Later, Houston Mayor John Whitmire told a press conference that one person died after a lightning strike possibly ignited a fire, while a police department employee died in floodwaters on his way to work.

Some 2.6 million households in Texas were without electricity as of Monday evening, according to the power outage tracker, as temperatures were forecast to climb above 32 degrees Celsius over the next few days.

Rose Michalec, 51, told AFP that Beryl blew down fences in her south Houston neighborhood.

"For a Category 1 storm, it's quite a bit of damage... It's more than we expected," she said.

In downtown Houston, several areas were completely inundated, including the park where 76-year-old Floyd Robinson usually walks.

"I'm seeing more of this kind of damaging water, than I've ever seen before," the life-long Houston resident told AFP.

"This is just the beginning of July and for us to have a storm of this magnitude is very rare," he added.

Along the Texas coastline, AFP journalists saw several waterfront homes and buildings with their roofs torn off by the wind.

Several communities in the area had issued voluntary or mandatory evacuation orders ahead of the storm.

Meanwhile in the neighboring state of Louisiana, one death was announced by the Bossier Parish sheriff's office, also by a tree falling on a home.

the total toll from the storm -- which began its tear across the Caribbean as a powerful hurricane over a week ago -- to over a dozen.

Beryl first slammed Grenada and Saint Vincent and the Grenadines as a Category 4 storm, before plowing past the Cayman Islands and Jamaica, and at one point strengthening to a highest-level Category 5.

It hit Mexico as a Category 2 hurricane on Friday, flattening trees and lamp posts and ripping off roof tiles, although there were no reported deaths or injuries there.

Beryl is the first hurricane since NHC record-keeping began to reach the Category 4 level in June, and the earliest to hit the highest Category 5 in July.

It is also the earliest hurricane to make landfall in Texas in a decade, according to expert Michael Lowry.

It is extremely rare for such a powerful storm to form this early in the Atlantic hurricane season, which runs from early June to late November.

Scientists say climate change likely plays a role in the rapid intensification of storms such as Beryl because there is more energy in a warmer ocean for them to feed on.

North Atlantic waters are between one to three degrees Celsius warmer than normal, according to the US National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. — AFP

NATO signs $700m Stinger missile contract to boost arms production

WASHINGTON: NATO has signed a nearly $700m contract to have member countries produce more Stinger missiles, one of many steps the alliance is pressing at its summit in Washington to get each country to boost its own weapons production capabilities.

Outgoing NATO Secretary General Jens Stoltenberg announced the contract yesterday at a Chamber of Commerce industry day focused on increasing NATO member countries' defense manufacturing capabilities to deter future attacks.

"There is no way to provide strong defense without a strong defense industry," Stoltenberg said.

The Stinger is a portable surface-to-air defense system that can be carried and fired by troops or mounted to a vehicle and used as short-range defense against aircraft. The Raytheon-produced system was one of the first weapons the US shipped to Ukraine following Russia's 2022 invasion.

The NATO summit is occurring against a backdrop of uncertainty: US political divisions delayed weapons for Ukraine for months and the upcoming presidential election is raising concern that US backing - with weapons and troops - in case of threats against member countries may not always be guaranteed.

Donald Trump, the presumptive Republican nominee, has boasted during campaign speeches that he'd encourage Russia to do as it wished with NATO members that do not meet their commitment to spend 2% of their gross domestic product on defense.

Out of 32 NATO members, 23 are expected to meet the 2% commitment this year, up from just six before Russia's invasion of Ukraine.

Estonian Minister of Defense Hanno Pevkur told the Chamber that Russia is now spending an estimated 7 to 9 percent of its GDP on defense. Estonia is spending more than three percent of its GDP on defense but needs to do more to refill its stockpiles, Pevkur said.

National security adviser Jake Sullivan told the Chamber of Commerce that for the first time ever, the NATO countries will each pledge to make plans to strengthen their own industrial defense capacity. — AP

Kenyan force in Haiti says 'no room for failure'

PORT-AU-PRINCE: The head of the Kenya-led multinational force tasked with curbing gang violence in Haiti said on Monday "there's no room for failure" and that the United Nations-backed police mission was committed to ensuring democratic elections in the Caribbean nation.

The nationally broadcast news conference was the first public comment from the Kenyan force, though the briefing did not take any questions from the media.

Still, major questions remain about the Kenyan force, which arrived late last month in Haiti - months after powerful gangs seized control of most of the country's capital, Port-au-Prince, and caused the prime minister's resignation.

"We have a job that we are committed to do," Kenyan officer Godfrey Otunge said. "We intend to achieve this by working closely with Haitian authorities and local and international partners dedicated to a new Haiti." The UN-backed mission, to which the United States has pledged over $300m in support, has been questioned from the start. At home, Kenyan police have long been accused by watchdogs and witnesses of human rights abuses, including in recent protests.

Haiti's new Prime Minister Garry Conille has called the history of foreign intervention in his country a "mixed bag" that has included human rights abuses and a "lack of respect for sovereignty and local culture." Some in Haiti, however, have welcomed the new mission with hope.

Kenya has pledged 1,000 police to the international police force - 200 initially arrived - and against gangs

Conille last week told the UN Security Council that the next contingent will be arriving "very soon." Later, they will be joined by police from the Bahamas, Bangladesh, Barbados, Benin, Chad and Jamaica. The force will total 2,500 personnel.

A transitional council appointed Conille as the new prime minister in May. US officials have urged him to prioritize establishing an electoral council as the country strives to rebuild its government. Conille is tasked with stabilizing the country in preparation for democratic elections in February 2026.

Otunge said the mission aims to "create security conditions conducive to holding free and fair elections." Haitian police chief Normil Rameau also addressed the nation, saying the UN-backed mission is focused on reclaiming all areas from gang control, reconstituting police presence in regions lacking authority and assisting Haitians displaced by the gangs to return home. — AP

Many US universities abandoning race-conscious scholarships worth millions

IOWA: Duke University recently discontinued a 45-year-old scholarship that covered tuition, currently about $66,000 a year, and housing costs of some Black undergraduate students.

The University of Iowa has changed the selection criteria for its Advantage Iowa Award, which dispenses more than $9m a year in financial help to first-year students from historically underrepresented groups. White students, who previously weren't eligible, can now apply.

Across the four-campus

University of Missouri system, officials are changing the eligibility rules for $17.2m in institutional and donor-funded scholarships earmarked for students from certain racial or ethnic groups. Race will no longer be considered in scholarship applications.

In the year since the Supreme Court ruled colleges could no longer consider an applicant's race as a factor in admissions, a growing number of schools have also applied the principles underlying the ruling to financial aid. Nearly 50 colleges and universities, mostly public institutions, have paused, ended or reconfigured hundreds of race-conscious scholarships worth millions of dollars to comply with the ruling, according to a tally. The awards identified are worth at least $45m, but probably amount to much more.

Republican state leaders and conservative activists say race-conscious scholarships and grants disadvantage White students in the same ways as race-conscious admissions policies. The court's ruling, which overturned the use of race in college admissions, didn't mention financial aid, but conservatives say universities should interpret it broadly to eliminate any race-based policies.

"The court gave us such a clear window into how it was thinking about race," said Kenji Yoshino, a law professor at New York University School of Law. "There isn't really a legal foot to stand on to fight for these

Mercosur leaders slam Milei's absence from summit

ASUNCION: Argentina's President Javier Milei raised the ire Monday of his counterparts on South America's Mercosur bloc for snubbing their summit just one day after attending a far-right gathering in Brazil.

Brazil's leftist President Luis Inacio Lula da Silva, with whom ultra-liberal Milei has traded many barbs, told reporters at the Paraguay summit that Milei's absence was "a huge foolishness."

Milei, a self-declared "anarcho-capitalist" who has picked fights with numerous leftist leaders since taking office in December, recently described Lula as a "little lefty" with an "inflated ego." But at Monday's meeting, even fellow right-leaning leaders Luis Lacalle Pou of Uruguay and Santiago Pena of host nation Paraguay, lamented Milei's absence.

It was the first time new member Bolivia attended a Mercosur summit, at which Argentina was represented by Foreign Minister Diana Mondino.

And it came one week after Bolivia recalled its ambassador to Buenos Aires over Milei qualifying claims of a coup attempt against his counterpart Luis Arce, a Lula ally, as "fraudulent." On that same day, the Argentine presidency announced that due to "agenda issues," Milei would no longer attend the Mercosur summit.

Instead he travelled to Brazil, where he attended a CPAC conference of Latin American conservatives with Lula's far-right predecessor Jair Bolsonaro over the weekend.

Mondino used her address to the summit Monday to criticize an "excess" of trade regulations within the bloc, which she said were hampering Mercosur's export capabilities.

Uruguay has long been pushing for more flexibility to allow individual bloc members to enter into free trade agreements with third countries such as China.

Brazil has reaffirmed strong ties with China under Lula, but Milei had threatened to cut ties with China during his campaign, and Paraguay maintains diplomatic ties with Taiwan. — AFP

Mexicans embrace the Force with lightsaber training

MEXICO CITY: It's not quite a galaxy far, far away, but about 20 people gather at dusk in a park in southern Mexico to practice fencing with glowing lightsabers — a sport inspired by the "Star Wars" saga.

Lightsaber duelling has grown in popularity in recent years, and France's fencing federation now recognizes it as an official sport, holding national championships.

In Mexico, the Jedi Knight Academy teaches fencing "with lightsabers in the style of the Jedi teachings," referring to the fictional guardians of peace and justice in the popular movie franchise created by legendary filmmaker George Lucas.

The academy offers a "playful sport with lightsabers, in a safe and fun way," Mauricio Rodriguez, an 18-year-old student, told AFP.

Both male and female participants, some dressed in masks and long capes, were lured by their love of science fiction and the chance of a bit of exercise.

Fencing "with a lightsaber makes me feel like I'm a Jedi, but as a sport it's interesting," said 24-year-old engineering student Victor Aceves.

"Swords are striking in themselves, but doing it with a lightsaber gives it a more fantastic touch," Aceves added.

Students must follow steps in their training: from the apprentice "padawan" to "knight," "grand knight," and "master." "I came here because I had to exercise in some way. It's the only thing that caught my attention," said 33-year-old Marisol Rodriguez.

The Academy has spread to several states in Mexico and will on July 21 hold a national tournament of lightsaber duels, open to all enthusiasts, from Padawans to Jedi masters." One of the Academy's founders, Ulises Vazquez, told local media that he wants to transform the practice into a real sporting discipline with the approval of the National Sports Commission (Conade). — AFP
