Qatar strengthens role of private sector in recycling efforts

SANAULLAH ATAULLAH
THE PENINSULA

DOHA: Qatar is set to significantly expand its waste management capabilities and deepen its engagement with the private sector, according to Eng Hamad Jassim Al-Bahr, Director of Waste Recycling and Treatment at the Ministry of Municipality.

Speaking to The Peninsula, Al-Bahr outlined ambitious plans to enhance the country's solid waste infrastructure and advance its sustainability goals.

As part of this vision, the Ministry of Municipality is preparing to expand the Domestic Solid Waste Management Center in Mesaieed. "The expanded facility will be capable of processing up to 3,000 tonnes of municipal and solid waste per day, in addition to the current capacity of 2,300 tonnes per day," said Al-Bahr.

He said that the expansion project will be offered as an investment opportunity to the private sector, with tenders expected to be announced by the end of 2026 or early 2027.

"Our future direction is focused on enhancing partnerships with the private sector by transferring a number of key services currently managed by the ministry," he stated.

"Among the responsibilities that have already been outsourced are the operation of waste treatment stations, the rehabilitation of landfills, the development of a new engineered landfill, and the management of the Mesaieed treatment center. Several additional strategic projects will also be opened for private sector involvement in the near future," said Al-Bahr.

The expanded facility will be capable of processing up to 3,000 tonnes of municipal and solid waste per day, in addition to the current capacity of 2,300 tonnes per day.

He said that Mesaieed's Waste Management Center, currently the largest of its kind in the Middle East, operates with a daily intake of 2,300 tonnes of waste.

"The facility features three integrated processing lines. Waste particles smaller than 45 millimeters are used to produce organic fertilizer; particles between 45 and 300 millimeters are sorted for recyclable content; and larger materials exceeding 300 millimeters are processed to generate electricity," said Al-Bahr.

He said that the facility employs the advanced "Dano Drum" system, a rotating cylindrical mechanism equipped with blades that shred mixed waste and separate it by size, ensuring effective resource recovery from unsorted materials. ➔P2

Qatar strengthens role of private sector in recycling efforts

"The center produces approximately 100 tonens of compost and generates around 50 megawatts-hours of electricity per day. The amount of recyclable waste varies depending on the time of year, with fluctuations seen during Ramadan, national holidays, and school terms," said Al-Bahr.

He said, the ministry plans to sign a memorandum of understanding with a reputed laboratory, one of the region's largest specialized research centers. "The agreement aims to support the development of advanced studies and fast-track solutions for utilizing recyclable materials in the production of new products."

Al-Bahr noted that the ministry continues to support recycling factories by providing them with essential raw materials at no cost. This initiative helps recycling plants process these materials into usable products, thus reducing landfill pressure and promoting a circular economy. In terms of local recycling production, Al-Bahr highlighted several factories already operating across the country, including facilities for recycling wood, used tires, glass, and scrap metal.

Construction sector to reach over $106bn by 2030

Speaking to The Peninsula, the market expert said: "The confidence in the construction sector is more positive today, with signs of a market ready to reinvent itself. We're seeing a renewed focus on development, driven by a strong pipeline of ongoing and emerging activity."

Much of the sector's momentum is being propelled by government-backed projects aligned with the QNV 2030. "Projects in typically strong sectors for Qatar, such as new liquified natural gas (LNG) lines, are being balanced with increased ambition for transport, tourism and infrastructure development," Brady explained.

According to Global Data, infrastructure spending in Qatar is expected to exceed QR90bn in 2024 alone, with mega-projects from Ashghal and Kahramaa leading the way. "This high demand, coupled with supply chain challenges, is contributing to elevated tender prices. Doha already ranks as the second most expensive city for construction in the Middle East, and the average cost of construction has reached $2,631," Brady said.

"Sports tourism remains a key focus for Qatar's economic growth—contributing between $1.6bn and $2.4bn to overall GDP in 2024," said Brady. "The Qatar National Vision 2030 prioritises sports as a key sector for national development, and the 2022 FIFA World Cup has acted as a springboard for showcasing wider global sporting events."

Qatar is gearing up for major events, including the 2027 FIBA Basketball World Cup and the 2030 Asian Games. "Preparations for the tournament included expanding the Hamad International Airport's capacity to serve 70 million passengers, a new Grand Cruise Terminal, and fresh entertainment districts in Lusail and Msheireb," Brady said. "This investment in infrastructure has put Qatar in a strong position to develop a thriving visitor economy." The official also remarked that Qatar's LNG plays a pivotal role in broader economic diversification. "Though it may seem counter-intuitive, this diversification relies on expanding the LNG industry, as a central driver of economic growth and a home-grown energy source, which provides the opportunity and confidence for government and private finance to invest in wider sectors," said Brady.

The Director further stated, "Prices for essential raw materials, such as steel and concrete, are much higher than in neighbouring countries. "Demand for such resources will increase alongside the resurgent demand we are seeing, so the sector must find ways of managing costs."

"Qatar's government is also seeking to strengthen its domestic manufacturing capability. It's important that this trend continues in order to fuel Qatar's long-term development and growth ambitions," he added.

Qatar's Ambassador to Italy and Permanent Representative to the UN Agencies based in Rome H E Khalid bin Youssef Al Sada chaired the Qatari delegation at the session.

MECC issues safe sea turtle rescue guidelines

THE PENINSULA

DOHA: The Ministry of Environment and Climate Change (MECC) has released guidelines on safely rescuing sea turtles found entangled in fishing nets, emphasising that their protection is a shared responsibility. This initiative aims to educate the public and marine enthusiasts on the correct and safe procedures to handle these vulnerable creatures without causing further harm.

Sea turtles, vital to marine ecosystems, often face threats from discarded fishing gear. Being prepared with the right knowledge can significantly increase their chances of survival. The MECC's detailed instructions outline a four-step process for safe intervention when encountering an entangled sea turtle.

When a sea turtle is found in a net, the first and foremost step is to avoid lifting it by its front or rear flippers, as these limbs are delicate and can be easily injured if mishandled.

The second crucial step involves lifting the sea turtle gently from its shell, either from the front or the back, as this provides a stable and secure grip without putting pressure on its limbs or internal organs. Once the turtle is securely held, the third step is to carefully cut away the fishing net using scissors, ensuring no harm comes to the turtle, with precision and caution being vital to avoid accidental cuts to its skin or shell.

Finally, after freeing the turtle from the net, the fourth step requires individuals to release it back into the sea gently from a low-lying area of a boat, ensuring it is far from the engine, which prevents the turtle from being injured by the propeller and allows it to swim away safely into deeper waters.

The MECC also provides important advice for interactions with sea turtles on beaches, especially during their nesting period (April to August). It is crucial that individuals do not approach or drive over nesting sites, but instead maintain a respectful distance from nesting turtles and their areas. Furthermore, one should avoid contact with eggs or hatchlings at all times, as disturbing them can have severe consequences for their survival.

Israeli forces kill 37 people in Gaza

GAZA CITY: Gaza's civil defence agency said Israeli forces killed 37 people in the devastated territory yesterday, including at least nine children who died in strikes.

Civil defence spokesman Mahmud Bassal told AFP 35 people were killed in seven Israeli drone and air strikes in various locations, and two others by Israeli fire while waiting for food aid in the Netzarim zone in central Gaza. He said the dead included three children who were killed in an air strike on a home in Jabalia, in northern Gaza. Bassal said at least six more children died in a neighbourhood in the northeast of Gaza City, including some in an air strike near a school where displaced people were sheltering.

AFP images showed mourners weeping over the bodies of seven people, including at least two children, wrapped in white shrouds and blankets at Al-Shifa hospital in Gaza City. Video footage filmed from southern Israel showed smoke rising over northern Gaza after blasts.

The Israeli military did not immediately respond to a request for comment.

Israel's military campaign has killed at least 56,412 people, mostly civilians, according to Gaza's health ministry. The United Nations considers these figures to be reliable.

On Friday, US President Donald Trump voiced optimism about a new ceasefire in Gaza, as criticism grew over mounting civilian deaths at Israeli-backed food distribution centres in the territory.

Asked by reporters how close a ceasefire was between Israel and Hamas, Trump said: "We think within the next week, we're going to get a ceasefire."

Israel has allowed a resumption of food through the controversial US- and Israeli-backed Gaza Humanitarian Foundation, which involves US security contractors with Israeli troops at the periphery.

United Nations officials on Friday said the GHF system was leading to mass killings of people seeking aid.

Eyewitnesses and local officials have reported repeated killings of Palestinians at distribution centers over recent weeks in the war-stricken territory.

Following weeks of reports, UN officials and other aid providers on Friday denounced what they said was a wave of killings of hungry people seeking aid.

"The new aid distribution system has become a killing field," with people "shot at while trying to access food for themselves and their families," said Philippe Lazzarini, head of the UN agency for Palestinian affairs (UNWRA). "This abomination must end through a return to humanitarian deliveries from the UN including @UNRWA," he wrote on X. — AFP

World in brief

Turkiye affirms mediation efforts in Middle East

ANKARA: Turkish Foreign Minister Hakan Fidan affirmed that his country is closely monitoring all developments in the Middle East and is actively involved as a mediator working to prevent or halt wars.

In his remarks, Fidan emphasised the need for an agreement between Tehran and Washington, noting that there is currently a period of silence between the two sides, despite both expressing a desire to return to the negotiating table.

He pointed out that the Europeans also have a process they wish to pursue with the Iranians, and stressed that the Middle East must remain on high alert for the potential collapse of the ceasefire and renewed mutual attacks between Iran and the Israeli entity. The Turkish Foreign Minister also noted that the conflict between Iran and the Israeli entity does not only affect those two countries but has broader regional implications. — QNA

Israeli strike on south Lebanon kills one: Ministry

BEIRUT: An Israeli strike on southern Lebanon killed one person yesterday, the Lebanese health ministry said, the latest attack despite a ceasefire between Israel and Hezbollah.

In a statement, the health ministry said that an "Israeli enemy" drone strike on a car in Kunin, south Lebanon, killed one man in a preliminary toll. The attack comes a day after Israel killed a woman and wounded 25 other people in strikes across the country's south. Lebanon's state-run National News Agency reported that the woman was killed in an Israeli drone strike on an apartment in the city of Nabatiyeh. The Friday attacks included a "wave of successive heavy strikes" in the Nabatiyeh region which injured seven people, according to the NNA. Israel has repeatedly bombed its northern neighbour despite the November ceasefire that aimed to end over a year of hostilities with Hezbollah. — AFP

Yemen's Huthi rebels say fired missile at Israel

SANAA: Yemen's Huthi rebels said they fired a ballistic missile towards Israel yesterday, in response to Israel's conduct towards Palestinians during the Gaza war. In Israel, warning sirens sounded in several areas.

In a statement, rebel military spokesman Yahya Saree said the Huthis had fired at a "sensitive Israeli enemy target in the occupied area of Beersheba using a Dhu Al-Fiqar ballistic missile".

The attack was in "response to the crimes of the criminal Zionist enemy against civilians in the Gaza Strip", Saree added. — AFP

Rwanda, DR Congo sign peace deal in US after rebel sweep

WASHINGTON: Rwanda and the Democratic Republic of Congo have signed a peace agreement Washington to end fighting that has killed thousands, with the two countries pledging to pull back support for guerrillas — and President Donald Trump boasting of securing mineral wealth.

"Today, the violence and destruction comes to an end, and the entire region begins a new chapter of hope and opportunity," Trump said as he welcomed the two nations' foreign ministers to the White House on Friday. "This is a wonderful day." The agreement comes after the M23, an ethnic Tutsi rebel force linked to Rwanda, sprinted across the mineral-rich east of the DRC this year, seizing vast territory including the key city of Goma.

The deal does not explicitly address the gains of the M23 in the area torn by decades of on-off war but calls for Rwanda to end "defensive measures" it has taken.

Rwanda has denied directly supporting the M23 but has demanded an end to another armed group, the Democratic Forces for the Liberation of Rwanda (FDLR), which was established by ethnic Hutus linked to the massacres of Tutsis in the 1994 Rwanda genocide.

The agreement calls for the "neutralization" of the FDLR, with Rwandan Foreign Minister Olivier Nduhungirehe saying the "irreversible and verifiable end to state support" to the Hutu militants should be the "first order of business." The process would be "accompanied by a lifting of Rwanda's defensive measures," Nduhungirehe said at a signing ceremony at the State Department.

But he added: "We must acknowledge that there is a great deal of uncertainty in our region, and beyond, because many previous agreements have not been implemented." His Congolese counterpart, Therese Kayikwamba Wagner, highlighted the agreement's call for respecting state sovereignty. "It offers a rare chance to turn the page, not just with words but with real change on the ground. Some wounds will heal, but they will never fully disappear," she said.

The agreement also sets up a joint security coordination body to monitor progress and calls vaguely for a "regional economic integration framework" within three months.

Speaking to reporters earlier Friday, Trump said the United States would be able to secure "a lot of mineral rights from the Congo." The DRC has enormous mineral reserves that include lithium and cobalt. — AFP

Pakistan flash floods and heavy rain kill 32

PESHAWAR: Heavy rain and flash flooding across Pakistan have killed 32 people including 16 children since the start of the monsoon season this week, disaster management officials said.

Flash floods and roof collapses over the past 36 hours have claimed the lives of 19 people, eight of them children, a statement yesterday by the Khyber Pakhtunkhwa provincial disaster management authority said.

Of the total fatalities, 13 were reported from northwestern Swat Valley. At least 13 people have also been killed in the province of Punjab since Wednesday, the area's disaster management authority said. Eight of the fatalities were children, who died when walls and roofs collapsed during heavy rain. Flooding in Khyber Pakhtunkhwa has also damaged 56 houses, six of which were destroyed. The national meteorological service warned that the risk of heavy rain and possible flash floods will remain high until at least Tuesday. — AFP

Thousands of protesters demand Thai PM's resignation

BANGKOK: Thousands of anti-government protesters rallied in the Thai capital Bangkok yesterday, demanding Prime Minister Paetongtarn Shinawatra resign after a leaked diplomatic phone call stirred public anger.

A Cambodian elder statesman leaked a call meant to soothe a border spat between the two nations in which Paetongtarn called him "uncle" and referred to a Thai military commander as her "opponent".

A key party abandoned Paetongtarn's coalition, accusing the 38-year-old premier of kowtowing to Cambodia and undermining Thailand's military, leaving her teetering with a slim parliamentary majority.

About 10,000 demonstrators jammed roads ringing the capital's Victory Monument, waving Thai flags and placards reading "Evil PM, get out". One of Thaksin's former allies, now among his harshest critics, was also a key organiser. Thailand has seen decades of clashes between the bitterly opposed "Yellow Shirts" who defend the monarchy and military, and the Thaksin-backing "Red Shirts", considered by their opponents a threat to the traditional social order. Mass protests have been uncommon in Thailand since 2021, when youth-driven demonstrations calling for monarchy reform ended with many leaders convicted under the country's strict lese-majeste laws. — AFP

Trump halts trade talks with Canada, defending interests of US tech firms

WASHINGTON: President Donald Trump on Friday abruptly halted trade talks with Canada, citing the country'splans to collect new taxes from large tech companies including Meta, Google, Amazon and other US businesses.

Trump called the taxes, which are due on Monday, "a direct and blatant attack on our Country" in a post to social media that branded America's closest ally as a "difficult" partner. "They were foolish to do it," he continued, at an unrelated news conference Friday. "So I said, we're going to stop all negotiations with Canada right now until they straighten out their act."

The sharp criticism marked a dramatic reversal from Trump's recent tone with Canadian Prime Minister Mark Carney, who hosted him at the Group of Seven summit of world leaders last week.

There, the pair sought to repair a rift Trump opened by repeatedly calling to annex Canada as the 51st state. The blowup imperils progress on consequential negotiations and signals the White House's alignment with tech leaders who view Trump as more friendly to their interests than former president Joe Biden.

American tech companies have aggressively lobbied against the taxes, which would apply to revenue that companies earn from online marketplaces, social media services and data sales that involve Canadian users. Carney said Friday that he has not talked with Trump about the Truth Social post on the taxes, which apply to all companies that make more than $20 million Canadian dollars from digital services - a limit that American tech companies argue provides an exemption for smaller businesses in the country.

Last week, he said the two nations were accelerating efforts to achieve a new security and trade relationship and hoped to wrap it up within 30 days. "We'll continue to conduct these complex negotiations in the best interest of Canadians," he told reporters in Ottawa on Friday.

Trump has wielded US trade policy as a cudgel to extract concessions from other countries since taking office in January, often declaring victory even as he walks back some of his most aggressive measures.

He has said his goal is to erase persistent imbalances in global trade, which he argues have hollowed out domestic manufacturing. But economists and businesses have warned that increased tariffs will result in higher prices for consumers.

The Trump administration is also locked in trade negotiations with the European Union, which has implemented a range of laws that regulate large American tech companies. Canada is "obviously copying the European Union, which has done the same thing, and is currently under discussion with us, also," Trump wrote.

Trump on Friday said Canada "just announced" the taxes first enacted in 2024. The country's finance department told Bloomberg that the payments were still due on on Monday, despite G-7 negotiations over "revenge" taxes.

Canada's digital services tax has long drawn criticism from US officials across the political spectrum. — THE WASHINGTON POST

France bans smoking in beaches, in parks and bus shelters

PARIS: France will ban smoking on beaches and in parks, public gardens and bus shelters from today, the government said.

The decree, published in the official government gazette yesterday, will also ban smoking outside libraries, swimming pools and schools, and is aimed at protecting children from passive smoking. The decree did not mention electronic cigarettes. Violaters of the ban will face a fine of €135.

"Tobacco must disappear from places where there are children," Health and Family Minister Catherine Vautrin had said in May, underscoring "the right of children to breathe pure air". Cafe terraces are excluded from the ban. — AFP

Russia to ban overseas storage of personal data starting July 1

MOSCOW: A new regulation banning the storage of Russian citizens' personal data abroad will come into effect on July 1, local media reported yesterday.

According to recently published amendments to Russia's law "On Personal Data," the entire cycle of handling personal data, including collection, systematization, storage, updating, modification and deletion, must take place exclusively within Russia's borders. Starting July 1, operators will no longer be permitted to interact with databases located outside Russia at any stage of data processing. — XINHUA

Greece replaces Migration Minister who quit over graft probe

ATHENS: Greece's government yesterday said it had replaced Makis Voridis a day after the migration minister resigned over claims he defrauded European farm subsidies while holding the agriculture brief.

Government spokesman Pavlos Marinakis said in a statement that Thanos Plevris, a former minister of health and former member of the Greek far-right LAOS party, will be sworn in on Monday to replace Voridis. Voridis's resignation came a week after the European Public Prosecutor's Office (EPPO) sent a case file to the parliament in Athens to investigate the alleged involvement of two former ministers in Prime Minister Kyriakos Mitsotakis's government in the misappropriation of EU funds. Voridis, a government heavy hitter, was agricultural development minister between 2019 and 2021 before being handed the migration portfolio in January. — AFP

Moscow summons German envoy over 'pressure' on Russian media

MOSCOW: Moscow summoned German ambassador Alexander Graf Lambsdorff on Friday to protest Berlin's alleged "pressure" on Russian journalists.

The row began after Russia's top media official in Berlin accused German police of confiscating his family's passports, prompting Moscow to warn of retaliation. "The German ambassador was summoned to the Russian foreign ministry today," the foreign ministry said on social media.

But Lambsdorf abruptly left the building after just 10 minutes to find a translator, according to the ministry.

"As it turned out, the German ambassador does not speak Russian," the ministry's spokeswoman Maria Zakharova said on Telegram.

The ambassador, who returned to the building to continue the meeting, did not comment on his knowledge of Russian. "We had a very long, as you can tell, and interesting conversation, about working conditions of our correspondents", Lambsdorf said after the encounter, adding that the talks will continue.

Moscow had lodged a "note of strong protest" to Berlin over "pressure on Russian media outlets in Germany," the ministry said in a statement after the meeting, adding there will be retaliatory measures. — AFP

Indigenous judge leads anti-robe rebellion in top Mexican court

OAXACA: Mexico's first Indigenous Supreme Court chief justice in more than a century is leading a rebellion against judicial robes, which he plans to shun in favor of ancestral clothing.

Hugo Aguilar, a member of the Mixtec Indigenous group, was propelled into the key position in June 1 elections — contests that made Mexico the world's only nation to choose judges at all levels by popular vote.

The constitutional law specialist was a legal advisor to the Zapatistas in 1994, during negotiations with the government following an armed uprising by the now demobilized guerrilla group.

He has said Mexico's native peoples are owed a "a significant debt," and vowed to wear traditional Indigenous clothing in court.

"I'm proposing not to wear a robe," he said in an interview with Mexican media.

"I'm going to emphasize this change: there is an Indigenous person in the court and we will wear the formal attire of the Indigenous peoples and communities," he added.

Judicial robes have been used in the highest court by presidential decree since 1941, but the ruling Morena party — which Aguilar is close to — is preparing reforms to allow alternative attire. Aguilar will take office on September 1, becoming Mexico's second chief justice of Indigenous origin. — AFP

US university leader resigns amid pressure over diversity programmes

WASHINGTON: The head of a prestigious US public university resigned Friday amid pressure over his alleged failure to curb diversity programs, the latest salvo in the Trump administration's war on academia.

The Department of Justice had privately pressured the University of Virginia to fire its president to help resolve a probe of its diversity, equity and inclusion efforts, according to the New York Times, which broke the story late Thursday.

It had reportedly threatened to withhold hundreds of millions of dollars in federal funding.

"I cannot make a unilateral decision to fight the federal government in order to save my own job," UVA President Jim Ryan said in a statement Friday.

Ryan wrote that risking federal funding cuts by staying in his role "would not only be quixotic but appear selfish and self-centered to the hundreds of employees who would lose their jobs, the researchers who would lose their funding, and the hundreds of students who could lose financial aid or have their visas withheld."

Ryan took the helm of the elite University of Virginia in 2018, a year after white supremacists marched with flaming torches through its campus amid heated debate over the removal of some Confederate monuments in southern states. Ryan's efforts to make the school more diverse and increase the number of first-generation university students reportedly rankled some conservative alumni.

"It is outrageous that officials in the Trump Department of Justice demanded the Commonwealth's globally recognized university remove President Ryan — a strong leader who has served UVA honourably and moved the university forward — over ridiculous 'culture war' traps," Virginia's two Democratic senators, Mark Warner and Tim Kaine, said in statement. — AFP

Zelensky seeks strong Poland ties before nationalist takes office

KYIV: Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelensky said yesterday it was "extremely important" for Kyiv to maintain friendly ties with neighbouring Poland, where incoming nationalist leader Karol Nawrocki opposes Ukraine's NATO bid.

Nawrocki won Poland's presidential election this month after a campaign in which he criticised Ukraine and accused Zelensky of "indecent" behaviour towards his allies.

Poland is one of Ukraine's closest allies and has served as a crucial logistics hub for Western military aid to help Kyiv's war effort against Russia's now more than three-year-long invasion.

Zelensky hosted outgoing Polish President Andrzej Duda in Kyiv on Saturday, ahead of Nawrocki's inauguration on August 6.

"Poland is now preparing for the inauguration of its new president, (Karol) Nawrocki,"Zelensky told reporters alongside Duda.

"We will do everything in our power to ensure that relations between our countries only grow stronger."

He added it was "extremely important" to preserve mutual support and understanding between the two nations.

Poland has taken in over a million Ukrainians since Russia's invasion of the country began in 2022.

But anti-Ukrainian sentiment has grown in recent years, intensifying during the election campaign. — AFP

Europe bakes in summer's first heatwave as continent warms

MARSEILLE: Sweating Europeans braced yesterday for the first heatwave of the northern hemisphere summer, as climate change pushes the world's fastest-warming continent's thermometers increasingly into the red.

Temperatures are set to rise to 37 degrees Celsius (99 degrees Fahrenheit) in Rome, driving the Eternal City's many tourists and Catholic pilgrims to the Vatican alike towards the Italian capital's some 2,500 public fountains for refreshment.

With residents of the southern port city of Marseille expected to have to cope with temperatures flirting with 40C (104F), authorities in France's second-largest city ordered public swimming pools to be made free of charge to help residents beat the Mediterranean heat.

Two-thirds of Portugal will be on high alert on Sunday for extreme heat and forest fires with 42C (108F) expected in the capital Lisbon, while visitors to -- and protesters against -- Amazon tycoon Jeff Bezos's on Friday wedding in Venice likewise sweltered under the summer sun.

"I try not to think about it, but I drink a lot of water and never stay still, because that's when you get sunstroke," Sriane Mina, an Italian student, told AFPTV on Friday in Venice.

Meanwhile Spain, which has in past years seen a series of deadly summer blazes ravaging the Iberian peninsula, is expecting peak temperatures in excess of 40C (104F) across most of the country from today.

Scientists have long warned that humanity's burning of fossil fuels is heating up the world with disastrous consequences for the environment, with Europe's ever-hotter and increasingly common blistering summer heatwaves a direct result of that warming.

With peaks of 39C (102F) expected in Naples and Palermo, Sicily has ordered a ban on outdoor work in the hottest hours of the day, as has the Liguria region in northern Italy. — AFP

11 charged in Russia-based plan to defraud US health care of $10.6bn

NEW YORK: US federal prosecutors charged 11 people on Friday in a Russia-based scheme to bilk Medicare — the American health insurance program for the elderly and disabled — out of $10.6 billion through fraudulent billing for expensive medical equipment.

The "transnational criminal organization" orchestrated a "multi-billion-dollar health care fraud and money laundering scheme" that included purchasing dozens of medical equipment companies from prior legitimate owners to perpetrate the fraud, according to the indictment dated June 18.

More than a million Medicare recipients had their personal information stolen and used by the defendants to file for billions of dollars in claims from Medicare and its supplemental insurers, prosecutors said in the filing.

The claims were filed through medical equipment providers that the group had purchased, but no equipment was ever sent out for the payments. Medicare paid "approximately $41 million as a result of the fraudulent submissions" and supplemental insurers are estimated to have paid out $900 million more between 2022 and 2024, prosecutors wrote.

The scheme was organized by Imam Nakhmatullaev, who is based in Russia, officials said, and managed the other defendants who were in Estonia, the Czech Republic and the United States.

The fraud was identified after "hundreds of thousands of Americans reported their concerns to Meidcare and its contractors after receiving explanation of benefit forms that reflected them purportedly receiving" equipment that they neither sought or received, the indictment said. — AFP

UK distances new spy chief from 'Nazi' grandfather

LONDON: The British government has distanced the incoming head of its foreign intelligence service from her grandfather following reports he was a Nazi spy known as "the butcher".

Blaise Metreweli will in the autumn become the first woman to lead MI6 in its 116-year-old history, the British government announced earlier this month.

The Daily Mail newspaper reported this week that her grandfather Constantine Dobrowolski defected from the Soviet Union's Red Army to become a Nazi informant in the Chernigiv region of modern-day Ukraine.

The newspaper said German archives showed Dobrowolski was known as "the Butcher" or "Agent No 30" by Wehrmacht commanders.

"Blaise Metreweli neither knew nor met her paternal grandfather," a Foreign Office spokesperson said in a statement.

"Blaise's ancestry is characterised by conflict and division and, as is the case for many with eastern European heritage, only partially understood.

"It is precisely this complex heritage which has contributed to her commitment to prevent conflict and protect the British public from modern threats from today's hostile states, as the next chief of MI6."

The Daily Mail said Dobrowolski had a 50,000 ruble bounty placed on him by Soviet leaders, and was dubbed the "worst enemy of the Ukrainian people".

He also sent letters to superiors saying he "personally" took part "in the extermination of the Jews", the newspaper added.

The head of MI6 is the only publicly named member of the organisation and reports directly to the foreign minister.

Metreweli, 47, will be the 18th head of MI6. Like her predecessors she will be referred to as "C", not "M" as the chief is called in the James Bond film franchise. — AFP

Russian strike on Ukraine's Odesa kills two, wounds 14

KYIV: A Russian drone strike on Ukraine's southern region of Odesa killed two people and wounded 14, including children, local authorities said yesterday.

Moscow has stepped up drone and missile attacks on Ukraine. Peace talks initiated by the United States to end the three-year conflict have meanwhile stalled.

"Rescuers pulled the bodies of two people from the rubble who died as a result of a hostile drone strike on a residential building," Odesa Governor Oleg Kiper said on Telegram.

The night-time strike wounded 14 people, Kiper added, "three of them children."

Separately, authorities of Ukraine's southern Kherson region said one person was killed and three others were wounded in Russian strikes over the past day.

"Russian troops targeted critical and social infrastructure and residential areas in the region," the Kherson's governor, Oleksandr Prokudin, said on Telegram early yesterday.

Tens of thousands of people have been killed in Russia's offensive, which has forced millions from their homes and devastated much of eastern Ukraine. At peace talks, Russia has demanded Ukraine cede even more land and give up Western military support as a precondition to peace — terms Kyiv says are unacceptable. — AFP

Senate Republicans near deal on Trump's tax bill, lawmakers say

WASHINGTON: Senate Republicans appeared near a deal Friday afternoon to pass President Donald Trump's massive tax and immigration agenda, setting up a sprint to have the legislation ready for Trump's signature by Independence Day.

Trump has pushed Congress to have his One Big Beautiful Bill on his desk a week from Friday.

The $3.3 trillion package aims to extend tax cuts, add new tax breaks, boost immigration enforcement, begin building Trump's "Golden Dome" missile defense program and more.

To offset the cost, Republicans proposed steep cuts to Medicaid, the state and federal health insurance program for low-income individuals and disabled people; and SNAP, the anti-hunger Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program formerly known as food stamps.

The Medicaid cuts, though, have sparked a revolt among some Senate Republicans and have left some House members leery of changes that the upper chamber could pursue.

The Senate still hasn't finished writing its version of the legislation, which would also have to go back to the House for approval if it passes. The House passed its own version last month.

After huddling with Treasury Secretary Scott Bessent and House Speaker Mike Johnson (R-Louisiana) at the Capitol on Friday, lawmakers emerged with rough details to resolve intraparty feuds over cuts to health care programs and the state and local tax deduction.

"We still have some talking to do in the Senate, but I think we're getting close," Sen. Markwayne Mullin (R-Oklahoma), said a key interlocutor with House negotiators. — THE WASHINGTON POST

Denmark develops tool to predict ice-free Arctic summers

COPENHAGEN: The Danish Meteorological Institute (DMI) said on Friday it was developing a tool to predict when the Arctic will be ice-free in summer, to anticipate the consequences on the Earth's climate."IcyAlert is designed to provide knowledge and early warnings that society can act on," project leader Tian Tian said in a statement.

Developed by scientists in Denmark and Belgium, the system will use "artificial intelligence, advanced climate modelling and causal analysis" to predict when the Arctic will be ice-free in summer "and to assess global climate impacts". Melting sea ice accelerates the warming of the Arctic, a region that is warming four times faster than the rest of the planet. The DMI said ice-free Arctic summers could become a reality as soon as the early 2030s.

This is expected to contribute to more extreme heatwaves and storms, as well as disrupting meteorological models, ecosystems and fishing. — AFP

Abrego Garcia lawyers ask US judge to delay release

WASHINGTON:, Lawyers for a Salvadoran man who was wrongly deported and then returned to the US to face human smuggling charges took the unusual step on Friday of asking a judge not to release him from prison.

"The irony of this request is not lost on anyone," said the lawyers for Kilmar Armando Abrego Garcia, whose case has become a key test of President Donald Trump's deportation policies. Abrego Garcia was summarily deported to a maximum security prison in El Salvador in March and brought back to the US this month to face human smuggling charges. A magistrate judge and a federal district judge have both said Abrego Garcia, who is being held in Tennessee, is eligible to be released on bail pending trial. — AFP

Sword attacker who killed UK schoolboy jailed for life

LONDON: A Spanish-Brazilian man who killed and nearly decapitated a London schoolboy with a Samurai-type sword in a 20-minute orgy of violence was on Friday jailed for life.

Marcus Monzo, 37, who had become psychotic from taking cannabis, was found guilty by a jury earlier this week of murdering 14-year-old Daniel Anjorin as he walked to school.

"Members of the public were attacked, police officers were gravely injured, a couple were terrified in their own home and a clever, talented young boy was killed," judge Joel Bennathan told Monzo as he handed him a life sentence with a minimum term of 40 years. — AFP
