International human rights and media organisations yesterday unanimously condemned the demand of shutting down Al Jazeera by the blocking countries terming the call a clear violation of international declarations on freedom of expressions.

Dr Ali bin Samih Al Marri, Chairman of National Human Rights Committee (NHRC) called on the international community to bear its moral and legal responsibility in face of the blatant violation that the Qatari people were being subjected to due to blockade imposed on their country.

He was addressing the opening session of two-day conference titled “Freedom of Expression: Facing up to the threat” being organized in Doha.

The conference is being organised in collaboration with the International Federation of Journalists (IFJ), the International Press Institute (IPI) and with support from the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) and Human Rights Watch (HRW).

Meanwhile, addressing the opening session of the conference, Executive Director of Human Rights Watch (HRW), Kenneth Roth, questioned Saudi Arabia’s allegations against Qatar of “funding terrorism” saying that the Saudi-led coalition in Yemen was behind the “death and starvation of Yemenis and the war has caused a huge humanitarian crisis” in the country and led to the spread of cholera.

US magazine: Qatar can easily withstand economic blockade

Washington O

The Gulf crisis was never about terrorism, but, it is about Qatar’s insistence on maintaining an independent foreign policy rather than following Saudi Arabia, according to the Washington Examiner magazine.

Dr Ali bin Sumaih Al Marri, President of the NHRC Qatar, writing his comments during the International Conference on Freedom of Expression Facing Up to the Threat, yesterday.

The four blockade countries want Doha to agree to leave its foreign policy to them, says US magazine Washington Examiner.

The four blockade countries were hoping that economic sanctions alone would turn Qataris against their government, they will have been sorely disappointed because blockade almost always show up support for the existing regime, the US magazine said.

The blockade could become semi-permanent, Qatar can easily withstand an economic siege and, as long as Turkish troops remain, it need not fear a land invasion, it said.
The magazine pointed out that it is hard to see how the quartet can back down, especially as “governments that look like losers become vulnerable domestically.”

The Washington Examiner stressed that the United States cannot afford a long-term division among its GCC allies which are geographically close to Iran, so needs to deal with the situation because no one else, except the US, has the authority to try to resolve the situation.

Commenting on this achievement, QU President Dr Hassan Al Dhsaham said, “Since its inception in 1977, Qatar University continues to serve as Qatar’s primary institution of higher education and as the fastest-growing university for research in the region. This significant success highlights the reputation that Qatar University has built over the last 50 years through a merger, partnerships it has built with CBA-based organisations, as well as international faculty expertise, the communication of the University’s vision and under umbrella of Qatar Foundation for Social Work. Best Buddies Qatar is a governmental non-profitable organisation, which aims to enhance life of people with and without intellectual and developmental disabilities through social integration and one-to-one long lasting meaningful friendships. In addition to partnering with Best Buddies Qatar, Ooredoo has undertaken several CSR-based initiatives across Qatar, including building and operating the Fahad Bin Jassim Kidney Centre, which supports kidney patients in Qatar, and the new Ooredoo Cancer Awareness Centre.

dr Alwaleed Alkhaja, Senior Editor at HBKU Press, says: “QScience’s new collection feature provides a compilation of articles on a particular subject matter so any users can have easy access to specific information. In this case, studies relating to Hepatitis prevalence in relation to the Arab region have been gathered. Hepatitis outbreaks occur mostly in developing countries, where sanitation is low and whose populations have low socioeconomic status, and it is crucial to be aware of its presence to prevent its spread.”

Mohammed Ali Alnsour, chief of Human Rights Division, local and international declarations on human rights.

“Demanding the closure of an office or blocking its activities in some countries was the clear violation of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. Violating the universal laws mean you are undermining your own commitments made with the world nations,” he said while talking to The Peninsula on the sidelines of NHRC conference on freedom of expression.

He said that OHCHR office had issued two statements opposing the demand of shutting down Alnsour. “We have indicated in our statements that it is a violation of freedom wherever parties or states, on political background and dimensions, will start demanding closing down of media outlets,” he added.

Alnsour said that the demand was clear violation of right of freedom of expression. “One can agree with the message or can have a disagreement with the content of the message but one cannot kill the messenger,” he said, adding that the content of the message and the way it is debated or discussed the messenger could not be killed.

He said that OHCHR had communicated with the(request) on the demand to the Gulf countries also apprising them about its legal implications. To a question that the UAE has withdrawn its demand of shutting down Alnsour he said: “We were unaware of its details but he said that the right of freedom of expression could not be touched in any condition.”

“Any country will sustain such demands. It will undermine its own media houses in the long run,” he said. Alnsour said that the matter of media outlets’ objectivity and credibility should be solely left on the audience - citizens. “If people think that the content of any media outlet is not objective then they have the right and power to change the channel on their screens,” he said.

He said that freedom and democratic space could not be undermined in any condition. When asked about the hardships being faced by journalists due to blockade imposed on Qatar, he said: “The harassment of journalists is an unfortunate trend in the region. UN Forum has discussed this issue and we are taking steps in this regard.”

Alnsour said that the reaction of international community was the security shield in case of violation of human right of freedom of expression. “The participation of all international organizations in this conference is a sign that all are united against curbs on media freedom and defended human rights,” he said, adding that the world community would always stand by one to defend right of freedom of expression.

HMC’s Home Healthcare Service to expand

The Peninsula

The Home Healthcare Service (HHCS) at Hamad Medical Corporation (HMC) aims to expand the reach of its services to ensure those in need have quick and easy access to the best quality care at home.

“HCS is a valuable service within HMC’s Continuing Care Group that strives to meet the same mission and standards set out in the National Continuing Care Strategy,” said Mahmoud Alnsour, HHCS, chief of the Continuing Care Group.

“Providing home care adult and palliative care is an important element of fulfilling HMC’s vision of delivering the same high-quality compassionate care to each and every patient,” he added.

HHCS, which is based in Hamad Bin Khalifa Medical City, has satellite locations in Al Khor and Al Wakra, helping to serve the public in both communities and the surrounding areas. Plans are underway to open another satellite office to provide services to those living in the Maaal and Al Bayan areas.

“HHCS provides home care to Qatar residents of all ages, Qataris and expatriates, who are temporarily or permanently housebound. We support patients’ timely discharge from HMC hospitals and provide clinical care and medical supervision to ultimately reduce the need for visits to the Emergency Department or for hospital admission,” said Dr Essa Al Salahi, HHCS Medical Director.

He added that the service has seen tremendous development over the past three years, with a significant increase in 2009, noting that it continues to develop and expand in accordance with the highest international standards. “The Service is accredited by the International Accreditation in 2009, and again in 2012 and 2015, and we continue to work on new programs to deliver more improvements and clinical interventions to patient care services,” added Dr. Al Salahi.

According to Naseem Braid, HHCS, chief of the Continuing Care Group, the satellite office provides a local base for patients and their families. “This is part of our strategic healthcare practice which aims to bring the service closer to our patients and the communities they live in, especially in densely populated areas,” he said.

HHCS is made up of a multi-disciplinary team, including nursing professionals supported by specially trained physicians and allied health professionals providing care.

Dr. Armaghan Butt, Senior Consultant with the Home Healthcare Service added: “During home visits, doctors conduct physical assessments, provide medical recommendations, order medications, write prescriptions, request referrals for diagnostics and providing interventions to stop or reduce the symptoms of patients.”

HHCS provides daily home healthcare care to about 1400 patients across Qatar in two shifts from Sunday to Thursday, between 7am and 8pm. Weekend care for intravenous care and wound dressings is also provided by the service, as well as 24-hour on-call coverage for patients requiring mechanical ventilator support and support for critical medical equipment breakdowns.

Red Crescent supports medical sector in Al Quds

OHA

The Qatar Red Crescent has donated US$ 40,000 to support the medical sector in Al Quds, said including US $250,000 to provide emergency support to the Palestinian Red Crescent and emergency services for the Makassed Hospital in Jerusalem in order to provide medical and consumer goods to meet the needs of this critical department and emergency situations.

This comes in light of the evaluation of events and the deteriorating humanitarian situation in the holy city, and the need to face the challenges of confrontation between the residents of the holy city and the Israeli occupation forces, in an alarming humanitarian situation.

The Qatar Red Crescent said in a statement that it is following with deep concern the repercussion of the dispute and the dire humanitarian situation in Jerusalem and the occupied Palestinian territories. It said that since the outbreak of these unfortunate events, the Qatar Red Crescent began to communicate with the Palestinian Red Crescent Society and the Makassed Islamic Charitable Society Hospital in Jerusalem with a view to prepare a quick assistance in response to the needs, in order to provide the necessary assistance as soon as possible to support the ability of these institutions to overcome the consequences of the crisis-related repercussions of this crisis and the consequences of the crisis.

Israel's foreign ministry noted in a statement that the guard ‘has immunity from investigation and imprisonment’.”

Russia deploys military police to monitor safe zones in Syria

Russia has deployed military police to monitor two safe zones being established in Syria, the defence ministry in Moscow said yesterday.

Senior commander Sergei Rudskoi said Russian forces had set up checkpoints and observation posts around a zone in the south-west and in another one covering Eastern Ghouta, near Damascus. The two areas are part of a broader Moscow-backed plan to create four “de-escalation zones” in rebel-held parts of Syria.

The announcement marks the first deployment of foreign troops to bolster the safe zones as Moscow seeks to patch up its war effort after its military intervention swung the six-year conflict in favour of President Bashar Al Assad. Rudskoi said Russian personnel on July 21 and 22 established two checkpoints and 10 observation posts along the boundaries dividing rebel forces and government troops in the southern zone. Earlier this month Russia, the United States and Jordan struck a deal to fix the boundaries of this zone and impose a ceasefire in the area.

Moscow has also informed Israel of its deployment and that the nearest Russian position is 13 kilometres from the demarcation line between Israel and Syrian troops in the Golan Heights. Rudskoi said. Under a second deal Moscow said it struck with “moderate” rebels over the weekend in Egypt, Russian forces yesterday also set up two observation posts in the area covering conflict-ravaged Eastern Ghouta, he added.

The Syrian army on Saturday announced a halt in fighting for parts of Eastern Ghouta, a rebel-held region on the outskirts of the capital, but a London-based monitor said regime warplanes still carried out raids. Assad’s forces have surrounded the Eastern Ghouta region for more than four years, and regime forces have regularly targeted the area.

In the Iranian political setup, families members of ruling elites always play important roles. It is safe to say that in the Islamic Republic of Iran, a position is outwardly occupied by one person but is in reality run jointly by a few close family members — this is not a new phenomenon.

In order for a regime to consolidate its power, it has to be protected by the First Amendment’s guarantees of religious liberty. It was a totalitarian ideology, and that therefore American Muslims are not protected by the American Constitution.

It is even claimed that he had played a key role in the crackdown of Green Movement activists after the 2009 presidential election. Earlier, during the 2005 presidential election, Ayatollah Khatami, who was the president, claimed that he had played a key role in the establishment of the Islamic Republic. Ayatollah Khatami was the first head of the Islamic Republic. Ayatollah Khatami was the successor of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, who was appointed by his son, Ahmad Khomeini. Ahmad Khomeini was a key figure in the revolution of Ayatollah Khomeini. The true identity of Muhammad Khatami, the current Supreme Leader’s son. It is widely believed that if Muhammad Khatami was elected to the presidency, Iran could come under international community. Even though he was not officially pronounced as the winner, he was present almost in every election. It was claimed that he would be appointed as a president by his father Ayatollah Khomeini.

Nepotism has been rampant among Iranian presidents. As a result of all these, family members of ruling elites always play important roles. Some people, once they win, forget those who have struggled for them. A day after, in 1997, Rowhani said at the cabinet meeting that it was now his 24 million voters’ turn to occupy the top governmental position. They can serve as a pretext to look into the nepotistic nature of the Iranian political system. In the Iranian political setup, family members of ruling elites always play important roles. They are popularly known as the ‘Larijani brothers’. They entered into a secret deal with the establishment to occupy top governmental positions. One should not forget that at present, President Rowhani is under pressure to do more to be more generous to the establishment.

On the other hand, the president has been forced to do more to be more generous to the establishment. Due to this, Rowhani is not connected to this web of revolutionary marriages. One can hardly find a senior official in the Islamic Republic who is not from a family. There are always middle-ranking positions. Middle-ranking positions are always occupied by relatives of the leading president. The same trend can be observed among middle-ranking officials at the provincial level. For instance, the governor of Baluchistán Province has appointed his nephew as the governor of Zahedan. The provincial capital of Sistan and Baluchestán.

Assuming that the Supreme Leader has no objections to nepotism, but rather encourages it. During a meeting with former President Mahmod Ahmadinejad and his cabinet members on July 5, 2005, Ayatollah Khatami read a verse from the Holy Quran about Prophet Moses’ (peace be upon him) love for his brother. The verse was a good case for proving that the Iranian political system is running on nepotism.

Duterte delivers State of the Nation address

Philippine President Rodrigo Duterte delivered his State of the Nation Address at Congress, in Manila, yesterday.

The President thanked China for launching special cards to enter Pakistan.

In the Philippines, it is really an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth. You took a life, you must pay it to die. That is the only way to get even. That is the only way to get even.

The lower house of Congress this year passed a bill to extend martial law across the southern region of Mindanao until the end of the year.

The death penalty was abolished in the Philippines in 2008 following a campaign by the influential Catholic Church.

Duterte also defended his decision last week to extend martial law across the southern region of Mindanao until the end of the year, to fight what he called a rebellion by militants led by the Islamic State group.

The militants have been occupying the southern city of Marawi for more than two months, defying a US-backed military campaign that has cost more than 600 lives.

"I declared martial law in Mindanao because I believed that was the fastest way to quell the rebellion at the least cost of lives and properties," Duterte told lawmakers.

On the foreign policy front, Duterte promised his decision to pursue warmer relations with China dovetailed a long-running row over rival claims to parts of the South China Sea.

Duterte thanked China for offering to fund infrastructure projects, and even build some bridges across the major river in Manila for free.

Critics of Duterte have said he is sacrificing Philippine interests in return for short-term Chinese investment or aid.

But Duterte insisted there were many long-term benefits to establishing closer ties with China as it seeks to balance rising US military power in the region.

Trucker charged in 10 deaths of immigrants

San Antonio AP

TUESDAY 25 JULY 2017

The driver of a bowling tractor-trailer found packed with immigrants outside a Walmart in San Antonio was charged yesterday in the deaths of 10 of his passengers and could face the death penalty over their tragic journey.

In outlining their immigration smuggling case against James Matthew Bradley Jr., 60, federal prosecutors depicted the trucker as a pitch-black, crammed with about 90 or more by some estimates, and so suffocating that the seats had to be removed to get out to relieve himself.

Bradley appeared in a federal court on charges of illegally transporting immigrants for financial gain resulting in death. The Clearwater, Florida, man was ordered held without bail another hearing on Thursday.

He did not enter a plea or say anything about what happened.

Montana blaze rages as California fire under control

The biggest US wildfire rages on in eastern Montana while California fires have gained ground on a massive blaze near Yosemite National Park yesterday, authorities said.

The two-blast Lodgepole Complex fire is the biggest wildfire in the United States currently, was only 5 percent contained yesterday after burning through 226,000 acres (91,000 hectares) of timber, brush and sage land near the Missouri River, according to the National Interagency Coordination Center.

The fire managers have had to rely on bulldozers and aerials and calls and emails to make up his lack of radiographs in some meetings.

Kushner, who met behind closed doors with all the intel- lligence Committee staff, made the remarks in a written state- ment he issued before the hearing giving the fullest account of his contacts with with Russian officials.

“I did not collude, nor know of anyone else in the campaign that had not been given the account of his contacts with Russian officials,” he wrote. “I had no improper contacts. I have not relied on Russian funds to finance my business activities in the private sector. US intelligence agencies have determined that Russia, under President Vladimir Putin, engaged in a campaign of hack- ing and propaganda to tilt the election in Trump’s favor. Rus- sian deniers the allegations and Trump has denied his campaign colluded with Moscow.

After meeting the commit- tee for about two hours on Capitol Hill, Kushner, in the hand of Trump’s daughter Ivanka Trump, returned to the White House. He made a statement to reporters outside but did not take questions.

The second and documents I have voluntarily provided will show that all of my actions were proper and occurred in the nor- mal course of events of a very unique campaign,” Kushner said. Trump, last month, has called the Russia protests politically moti- vated, lashed out at the investigations in Twitter mes- sages yesterday.

The Senate Intelligence Committee is one of several con- gressional panels investigating Russian matters, along with a criminal probe led by special counsel Robert Mueller, a former assistant of the FBI. Kushner arrived on Capitol Hill with Mueller’s white-collar defense lawyer Abbe Lowell.

QM kicks off tours for Culture Pass holders

The National Museum of Qatar (QM) yesterday kicked off the series of exclusive tours of the National Museum of Qatar for its Culture Pass programme members.

After the announcement last month, QM said hundreds of residents have already signed up for an opportunity to be one of the first visitors to have a peek into the Jean Nouvel designed museum which resembles a desert rose with its unique interlocking disc design.

Yesterday’s tour was the first of the 16 tours QM is organizing in the run up to the much anticipated opening of the National Museum in December next year. It provided the first batch of visitors the chance to see up close the amazing exterior and interior of the architectural masterpiece by the globally acclaimed French architect.

Neuroticism may be linked with long life

London

IANS

Individuals with higher levels of neuroticism — a personality trait associated with negative emotions — are likely to have longer lifespan and lower risk of mortality, regardless of their health conditions, a study has claimed.

Persons with high levels of neuroticism are more likely to experience negative emotions — including irritability, frustration, nervousness, worry and guilt — compared with those who have lower levels of neuroticism.

“Our findings are important because they suggest that being high in neuroticism may have a beneficial health effect, perhaps by making people more vigilant about their health,” said lead researcher Catherine R Gale from the University of Edinburgh.

The findings showed that higher neuroticism is linked with slightly lower risk of death from all causes and cancer.

However, “we found that this protective effect was only present in people who rated their health as fair or poor”, Gale explained.
