Amir: World is one family facing common destiny

Amir H H Sheikh Tamim bin Hamad Al Thani participated in the High-Level Meeting of the General Assembly to commemorate the 75th anniversary of the United Nations that was held via video conference at the UN headquarters in New York.

The founding of the United Nations has represented a great hope for mankind in the aftermath of the disasters of the Second World War. By creating foundations from it and from the absence of a global framework of international cooperation among nations that don’t accept our principles, and agreed upon and recognized in the United Nations, there is a collective confrontation against global crises.

The United Nations was established on the belief of an existing humanity that binds us together, and a common perception of the rights of the human being and his dignity thus constituting a turning point in international relations. The United Nations has made a great stride in achieving the goals agreed upon by the international community and has also been able over the past decades to make many contributions for the advancement of humanity, among the world of people and changing their lives for the better thanks to various institutions and organisations, which are no longer conceivable to imagine our contemporary world without them. “If the Amir said.

But it is still falling short of limiting the necessary mechanisms to impose its principles on its members while the right of might still outweighs the might of right to different regions in the world and in different areas of our life.

Today, as we are on the threshold of the third decades of the current century, and despite these appreciated efforts, the world is still facing emerging and unprecedented problems. We are witnessing a strange process in various aspects, foremost of which is the exacerbation of regional and international flashpoints of tension, disarmament problems, environmental, racial, sustainable development, terrorism and other global challenges.

Qatar Airways resumes flights to Yerevan

Qatar Airways will resume flights to Armenia’s capital, Yerevan, on September 22. Earlier this month, Qatar Airways announced that it would be increased to 10 weekly flights on September 20.

The national carrier of Qatar has also increased frequency to Portugal from three weekly flights to 17 weekly flights, in addition to 14 weekly flights to Amsterdam. Qatar Airways resumed flights to Amsterdam last month.

On September 22, the airline will increase its frequency toClark. We have ordered 20 new aircraft to the Philippines servicing the cities of Clark, Cebu and Manila,” Qatar Airways said.

Qatar joined the world yesterday in raising awareness about Alzheimer’s disease and challenge the stigma that surrounds it in celebration of World Alzheimer’s Day.

A series of awareness initiatives, which are being held under the global campaign theme of Talk About Dementia. As part of the series, landmark buildings were lit up in purple to mark World Alzheimer’s Day yesterday. Some buildings include the Diwan, the Ministry of Tourism and Antiquities, the Ministry of Education, the Ministry of Social Development, and the Ministry of Municipality and Environment.

In the spirit of the global campaign held each September, several online awareness and awareness initiatives are being held as part of the campaign theme. The Ministry of Social Development and the Ministry of Municipality and Environment are among the organisations that have contributed to the success of the campaign.

A joint educational seminar was hosted by Qatar and Oman with the participation of Dr. Hanad Al Hamad, Qatar’s National Lead for Healthy Aging, Senior Consultant Geriatrician and Medical Director Rumahal Hospital and Qatar Rehabilitation Institute, and Dr. Hasab Al Sada, who is currently the President of the World Alzheimer’s Day.

The seminar was designed for families and caregivers dealing with Alzheimer’s disease or other form of dementia. The event was attended by Al Zeer, CEO of Qatar Rehabilitation Institute, and Chairwoman Omani Alzheimer’s Society.

Qatar has advanced in its work on dementia research, diagnosis, care, and support. Qatar is one of the few developed nations, and the only Arab country, working on a dementia plan for its local population because it recognises the huge impact dementia can have on society. He said.

The National Dementia Plan 2018-2022 aims to establish a framework for future dementia care, planning and delivery to make a difference in the lives of people living with dementia and their caregivers.

Dementia and Alzheimer’s disease are often used interchangeably to describe several symptoms and issues related to brain health and functioning. Alzheimer’s is a specific disease, whereas dementia describes a group of disorders associated with a decline in memory, reasoning, or other thinking skills. In Qatar over 4,000 people over the age of 60 may have dementia. This figure may triple to over 40,000 people by the year 2050 if no cure or improved prevention takes place, according to the UN.

Qatar to host 4th Arab Digital Content Forum on October 5-7

Qatar is hosting the 4th Arab Digital Content Forum on October 5-7 under the theme “The Future of Arabic Content on the Internet.”

The event is organised by the Ministry of Transport and Communications under the auspices of the League of Arab States in collaboration with Communications Regulatory Authority (CRA) of Qatar, the Arab Information and Communication Technologies Organisations (AICTO) and the UN Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia (ESCWA).

The 3-day virtual forum will focus on Arabic digital content, its advancement and challenges. It will also discuss the importance of Arabic digital content during crises and the role it has played in the current COVID-19 situation and lessons from this for other crises.

Other key topics relevant to the creation of Arabic digital content include the prospects of e-learning in the Arab region, the future role of Arabic digital content within the education sector and learnings, particularly from the education sector’s response to the COVID-19 situation.

The role of the Arabic digital content within a smart nation and the Arabic digital content and entrepreneurship amongst youth are also among the key discussions. The Arabic Digital Content Forum aims to enhance and support the development of Arabic digital content in all sectors and highlight innovations, breakthroughs, best practices and successes in the development of Arabic digital content. It also aims at increasing the international and regional cooperation.

Mol and WCM-Q sign cooperation agreement

The Ministry of Interior (Mol) signed a cooperation agreement with Weill-Cornell Medicine-Qatar (WCM-Q) to extend cooperation in implementing an optional course in forensic medicine. The course will be presented by the WCM-Q in cooperation with Mol’s Forensic Medicine Center.

The agreement was signed by Assistant Director of Public Security Major General Abdulrahman Mohammad Al Suwaidi and Dean of WCM-Q Dr. Javaid Sheikh.

Speaking on the occasion, Major General Al Suwaidi said forensic medicine was one of the main pillars of achieving justice, uncovering crimes and preserving their vagueness and helping the judiciary and investigation and investigation officers to reach the perpetrators. The agreement would contribute to the participation of faculty members at the College with the Forensic Medicine Center.

The cooperation agreement includes providing material for college students during the study period for specialisation that combines the tasks of the doctor and the investigator at the same time.

The Director of Planning and Quality Department at Mol Brigadier Abdul Rahman Majid Al Hail said under the cooperation, students of WCM-Q, who are registered in the subject, will receive appropriate training and in particular health specialities in addition to an integrated team of forensic doctors at the Mol’s Forensic Medicine Center.

The Ministry of Interior, in statistics released recently, indicated that Qatar and its leadership paid exceptional attention to the health sector, with residents enjoying high-quality health-care services at any time, stemming from the belief in the importance of building a healthy society in promoting the comprehensive development process at all levels.

She explained that the PHC launched its strategic plan for 2019-2023 under the slogan "A healthier Future for Our Families," consisting of six basic priority areas, 20 strategic goals and 80 specific activities. Two of the six priority areas are centered on the patient through providing high and equal health-care services, and other four areas related to the work force, strong partnership with patients, families and the health-care sector, the primary care system, workforce and society, as well as an innovation and sustainability organization.

On the success of the Ministry of Public Health and the health institutions operating under its umbrella, in combating the coronavirus pandemic, Dr. Mariam Ali Abdulmalik said: “Inclusivity, accessibility, care and awareness are values that form the core of the Foundation, and they are reflected in all our activities. We are delighted to now be offering in partnership with Generation QF, programmes that enable them to engage with others. By continuing to further extend the @GA4Good Instagram awareness workshops series, we are working to help secure and consolidate the inclusion of people of all abilities in our community.”

Al Khori, added: “Conducting such programmes is part of the Generation QF mission to provide equal opportunities for all and encourage children and youth with our football for development methodology. Inclusion is one of our core values, and we are going from strength to strength as we respond to COVID-19 pandemic with the same determination and commitment to achieve what we have achieved so far. We are proud of all we have made, and we will continue striving to be by the side of our society and community partners in our fight against COVID-19.”

Mr. Al Amri, added: “Qatar and its leadership paid exceptional attention to the health sector, in order to citizens and residents enjoy high-quality health services at any time, stemming from the belief in the importance of building a healthy society in promoting the comprehensive development process at all levels.”

The number of novel coronavirus infections in Iran has risen to 3,348 in the past 24 hours, the highest daily tally since early April, taking total cases in the Islamic republic to 59,930, a government spokesman told local state TV yesterday.

Sina Samadifar, 17, said yesterday that he and fellow migrants are pushing the official death toll to 14,000, but that the number of deaths in the west of the country is likely to be much higher. A live stream was broadcasting the incident at a protest outside the parliament building.

The number of new cases of COVID-19 did not show the extent of the unrest, but is a figure of interest. The government was characterised as "shoveling the spike" in a government order to a public health expert.

Iran's supreme leader Ayatollah Ali Khamenei said yesterday that the Islamic republic's 1979 Islamic revolution has made Iran's revolution an "exact imitation" of the Islamic revolution in Iraq.

The government has been accused of attempting to "put pressure on the Islamic republic's leadership" through the novel coronavirus pandemic, according to the Islamic republic's top leader.

Iraj Harirchi said last week that the novel coronavirus pandemic in Iran had passed its peak. The Islamic republic has reported a total of 425,000 infections and 18,334 deaths since the first cases were reported on February 19.

The country is acting "with its hands handcuffed" to achieve its rights, freedom and for the families of the martyrs, the Islamic republic's top leader said yesterday.

The Islamic republic's top leader Ayatollah Ali Khamenei said yesterday that he would accept the novel coronavirus pandemic as a "test of whole world", including Iran.

He said he would accept the "martyrs" of the novel coronavirus pandemic as a "test of whole world", including Iran, and that he would accept the "test of whole world", including Iran.

Aouen warns of ‘hell’ if no new govt formed

Aouen, Lebanon’s President Michel Aoun, criticised his political opponents, the groups Hezbollah and Amal, for insisting on hold to the Finance Ministry portfolio in any new government and on naming the Shi'a ministers in the Cabinet.

Lebanon’s President Michel Aoun criticised his political allies, the Shi'a groups Hezbollah and Amal, for insisting on hold to the Finance Ministry portfolio and on naming the Shi'a ministers in the Cabinet.

The crisis has been triggered by the flag explosion at Beirut’s port caused by the detonation of tons of ammonium nitrate, which killed 174 people and injured thousands and caused huge losses worth billions of dollars.

Macron has previously described his initiative, which includes a road map and a timetable for reforms, as “the chance of a lifetime” for Lebanon.

While initially committing to the plan and naming a new prime minister-designate who promised to deliver a cabinet within two months, politicians have been unable to meet the deadline amid political maneuvering to see if the government formation is being carried out, away from the usual consultations and horse-trading among political factions.

Algerian president says early legislative election

Algeria’s National Assembly speaker said yesterday that the crisis-hit country needs early legislative elections aimed at “remolding a new face” and ensuring stability in the country.

The next National Assembly session, which will vote on the formation of the government according to the constitutional revision, will be decided in due course.

The next line of action of the government formation is being worsened by the Aug. 4 explosion at Beirut’s port which killed 174 people and injured thousands and caused huge losses worth billions of dollars.

The term of the widely discredited current lower house, elected in 2012, was originally set to end in 2022.

Nine top Hezbollah officials, including the head of its military wing, have been listed as terrorists by the United States.

The crisis has been triggered by the flag explosion at Beirut’s port caused by the detonation of tons of ammonium nitrate, which killed 174 people and injured thousands and caused huge losses worth billions of dollars.

Macron has previously described his initiative, which includes a road map and a timetable for reforms, as “the chance of a lifetime” for Lebanon.

Qatar moving ahead with approach based on improving rights

The State of Qatar confirmed that it adhered to its reform approach, which is based on respecting human rights and maintaining its continuous cooperation with the Human Rights Council and its relevant mechanisms.

In this regard, the State of Qatar will work on taking into account the recommendations and observations made by the special procedures of the council.

In the state of Qatar, the approach will be based on the human rights obligations arising from the agreements to which the State has acceded.

This came in the State of Qatar’s statement during the interactive dialogue with the Working Group on Arbitrary Detention regarding its report on the state visit to the country, the statement was delivered by Permanent Representative of the State of Qatar to the UN Office Geneva, H E Ambassador Ali Al-Khalifa Al-Khalifa, during the 50th session of the Human Rights Council.

The Excellency said that based on the State of Qatar’s firm commitment to the principle of work carried out by special procedures, the State of Qatar will continue its cooperation with them to allow the continuation of the open-ended mandate intended to the human rights mechanisms.

In this regard, he pointed out that the State of Qatar received four special procedures holders last year and hosted four visits to the end of this year. He thanked the Working Group on Arbitrary Detention for accepting the invitation and said that H E Ambassador Ali Al-Khalifa Al-Khalifa had added that Amir H H Sheikh Tamim bin Hamad Al Thani attended the 45th session of the UN Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination, adding that the aim was the reduction of the number of prisoners.

Richest 1%’s emissions twice that of poorest 50% of mankind

The richest 1% of people are responsible for more than twice as much carbon pollution as the poorest half of the world’s population — 3.1 billion people — new research showed Monday.

Direct human consumption of CO2 has increased 115 times since 1900, said Edward Goodall, a research fellow at the Grantham Institute for Climate Change.

Marine and terrestrial biodiversity, and the functioning of ecosystems and ecosystems, are threatened by the loss of biodiversity, said Goodall.

“Many countries have signed the Convention on Biological Diversity, but there is no sign of global action to meet the targets,” said Goodall.

The report, the first to look at emissions by extreme wealth, found that the US and the UK are the top emitters per head, at more than 30kg CO2 equivalent per year, or nearly twice the amount of the rest of the world combined.

Emissions from the world’s 1% richest people are responsible for 40% of carbon emissions, the report found.

The report looked at emissions from the 1% richest people, based on global income, compared to the 50% poorest, based on global consumption.

The richest 1% of people are 47 million people, the report found.

“Rich and poor people are emitting more CO2 per head than the poorest half of the world,” said Goodall.

He added that resource consumption is driven by the high expectations of the rich, and that the emissions gap would only get worse.

The report, “Poverty, Richness and the Carbon Double-Standard,” was published by the Grantham Institute and the Tyndall Centre, with support from the UK Department for International Development.

The report was released on the same day as a landmark meeting of world leaders in New York to focus on the global climate crisis.

The meeting takes place on the first day of the 193-nation UN climate conference, which is expected to produce a roadmap for action on the growing climate crisis.

The rich 1% of people are the highest emitters, according to the report, despite accounting for a small fraction of global consumption.

The rich 1% emit 8.5 times more CO2 per head than the poorest 50% of people.

The rich 1% emit more than double the emissions of the poorest 50%, said Goodall.

In the first phase, doses will be distributed proportionally, meaning for each share of a country’s population, that country will get doses for a share of its population. This will start up to 2% of each country’s population, the idea that doses for 3% of a country’s population could be used to vaccinate medical workers first, and then up to 20%. If supply is still limited after the 20% threshold is met, the allocation method will switch. In Phase 2, Covax will consider each country’s COVID-19 risk level, sending more doses to countries at higher risk.

Under “Operation Warp Speed,” the United States has placed advance orders for hundreds of millions of doses of vaccines, with an aim to get doses for most Americans, including those who are at low risk, before anyone else.

The vaccine distribution plan was unveiled after being developed for a share of its population. The risk of each country will be calculated following the COVID-19 risk level. The proposed allocation formula was reviewed by The Washington Post ahead of its publication, taking into account the risk.

The framework reflects the political nature of global health, and the fact that the WHO is a member of that push. It seems like a compromise between the US and the rest of the world.

The framework makes clear that each participating country can decide whom to vaccinate first, but is based on the idea that doses for 3% of a country’s population could be used to vaccinate medical workers first. Indian and Chinese military commanders met again on Tuesday in the Moldo area in Ladakh to discuss de-escalation of tensions at their disputed border in the mountainous Ladakh region.

Details of the talks, held in the Chinese side of the Indian-controlled Ladakh region, were not immediately disclosed. For nearly three months now, the Indian foreign ministry official was also involved in the military-level meeting, said an Indian official, speaking on condition of anonymity in line with government regulations. There was no information immediately available from Beijing.

Defence sources said several rounds of talks by military, diplomatic and political officials indicatong that negotiating between the two countries’ armed forces and ministers in Moscow this month had not yet been successful.

Yesterday’s military-level talks come two weeks after India and China’s foreign ministers met on September 10 and 11, where their troops should disengage from the tense standoff that has raised proper distance and ease tension.

The foreign ministers did not comment on the de-escalation of the tension of the Indian troops from the Indian-held territories, artillery and tanks that have been in the region since the standoff began in May.

After that clash, the two countries partially disengaged as per the agreement. The Indian and Chinese troops have remained where they are in the valley for the past month, the official said.

At least 20 Indian soldiers were killed and two dozen were injured in the June 15 clash.

In 1962 that spilled into Ladakh region. Since then, troops have guarded the de facto border, referred as the Line of Actual Control, for 41 years. The situation has been tense.

In the past, the Indian military and officials had repeatedly warned that any minoriscal action in either site can have disastrous consequences beyond the cold desert region of Ladakh.

Both India and China have provided little information to the public and media in two countries which have sometimes dramatically changed their bilateral relations.

In Ladakh, India’s exit in June to the deadly border clash in the snows as a clash in a long-running border dispute involving using clubs, stones and their fire arms.

Twenty Indian soldiers were killed in the clash but have also suffered casualties, but has not given any details.

Major Arvind Sinha, the head of the 13 Corps, which is posted in Ladakh said the soldiers and troops are “continuing to curb the virus and effectively deal with the massive pandemic situation.”

Aided by lockdowns in March, taking its total to 5,541 deaths on Sunday, its highest daily toll since the beginning of its outbreak in January, marking its total to 5,541 fatalities and 327,000 cases. Myanmar had gone weeks without a new death, and the number of cases grew at a rate of 10 to 100.

Both Indian and Chinese military officials have kept the tensions high at their border to keep the other side watchful.

Analysts say the November elections is a test of Myanmar’s democratic transition.

Parties hailed campaigning and casting their vote to curb the virus, in India and other parties, such as the National League for Democracy, one of the major parties in Bahn state, which has been locked in a political fight.

For weeks, said candidates were unable to visit voters because of the lockdown.

The German city of Munich will keep its virus-free status at the highest public spaces in cities, the city announced yesterday, as the authorities reported rapid increases in coronavirus infections.

Masks will be made compulsory in all public city centres like the Marienplatz and the Tegel airport. Contact between households will be restricted to gatherings of a maximum of 10 people and no more than five people to sit in public places as well as in restaurants.

Munich is taking the drastic step of backing up public places, as well as in restaurants.

No EU sanctions on Belarus despite oppn leader’s plea

European Union foreign ministers are set to reject a diplomatic stand-alone over Belarus yesterday despite a call by the country’s main opposition leader to impose sanctions against officials accused of rigging the election.

Belarus opposition leader Svetlana Tikhanovskaya was touring Brussels to try to convince EU leaders to impose sanctions on Belarusian officials after the disputed August 9 vote.

A strict stand against Belarus’ President Alexander Lukashenko, who has ruled the country for 26 years, is expected to be watered down at tomorrow’s summit of foreign ministers.

Belarusian authorities have accused the EU of distorting the election results and will not attend.

The United States is losing on average over 600 people a day to the virus. Although new cases are down about 50 percent from the peak in July, the United States is still reporting on average nearly 40,000 new infections a day — the highest number in the developed world.

"This is really not surprising," said Twila Moon, a climate scientist who has spent more than 40 years of record keeping, said researchers at the University of Colorado.

Centers for Disease Control and Prevention Director Robert Redfield said for months he’s worried about the fall and winter. "We’re ever had" citing con- cerns both within Wisconsin, where new cases have been slowing and the midwestern states. The pandemic has now claimed over 900 lives in the United Kingdom.

"If the virus continues to spread in a broader part of the country," he said.

Trump to name new SC judge by Saturday

President Donald Trump said Thursday he will announce his third US Supreme Court justice pick "tomorrow or Thursday" so many months before the Nov. 3 election. Trump’s pick will replace Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg, who died last Friday. Trump said he would put forward a nominee on Friday or Saturday and called upon the Senate, controlled by his fellow Republicans, to vote on confirmation ahead of the election.

"We love Florida." The state is a major political battleground, with Trump already having named Barrett and Lagoa as two of his possible candidates two weeks earlier. Trump has mentioned as possible candidates two federal appellate judges: Amy Coney Barrett, at age 48 the youngest among the 9 circuit court judges who are on Trump’s short list; and Lagoa, at 47, a former federal prosecutor who has won a record 30 appeals court cases in three years since his confirmation, becoming the youngest sitting judge on the 11th Circuit Court of Appeals. Barrett and Lagoa are two of the court’s five Republicans and are seen as the candidates with the best chance of being confirmed before Ginsburg is due to be sworn in until January 3. Democrats are hoping to win the Senate after the Nov. 3 election, and they are looking “very seriously” at five posts.

For most NYC students, back to school but not the classroom

The team had previously compared the geographic distribution of the virus with the number of hospitalizations. They had found an inverse correlation between lower infection rates and a higher number of hospitalizations. The authors concluded that this inverse correlation was driven by the fact that areas with lower infection rates had fewer hospital beds and therefore less capacity to handle an influx of patients.

The source said Lagoa, a 47-year-old former federal prosecutor who has won a record 30 appeals court cases in three years since his confirmation, becoming the youngest sitting judge on the 11th Circuit Court of Appeals, will be submitted to a scientific advisory group consisting of leading scientists from across the country.

As New York City schools prepare to start the school year this fall, the city’s teachers union, who sounded alarms that schools couldn’t open safely, will not appeal the court’s decision to overturn the city’s controversial plan to phase in-person instruction after the coronavirus outbreak in Brazil had led the city to delay the start of the school year.

The team found a similar correlation in Brazil, where the levels of anti-dengue antibodies were also lower in regions with fewer dengue cases. The authors concluded that this correlation was driven by the fact that areas with fewer dengue cases had fewer susceptible individuals, and therefore less capacity to handle an influx of patients.

A breakthrough came when the team compared the spread of dengue with other viruses and found that high community transmission of other viruses was linked to a higher number of hospitalizations. The authors concluded that this correlation was driven by the fact that areas with higher transmission rates of other viruses had fewer hospital beds and therefore less capacity to handle an influx of patients.

The team found that in areas with low transmission rates of other viruses, hospitalizations were much lower. The authors concluded that this correlation was driven by the fact that areas with lower transmission rates of other viruses had fewer susceptible individuals, and therefore less capacity to handle an influx of patients.

Cyanobacteria proliferate in blooms. Once cyanobacterial blooms form, there is no simple solution to get rid of the blooms that have formed on the surface of water. They can damage the liver or nervous system of humans and animals. Sometimes called blue-green algae, they have algae-like characteristics such as sunlight to make food. When they multiply they cause blooms that spread across the surface of the water, which can be toxic to fish and bloom watchers.

Fortifiers using Farming can use these cyanotoxins to form toxic blooms by feeding the fish. Cyanobacterial dynamics in bloom form may cause harm to human health.

The Art and Cultural Narratives of a Qatar on show at Mathaf will be discussed by guest speakers Dr. Malik, artist and Director of the Visual Arts Center, Ministry of Culture and Sports in Doha, who has been awarded a prize for a Qatar narrative or documentary film, said OFF while congratulating the filmmaker and the cast and crew of the film.

As part of its ongoing efforts to spark constructive debate and engage the wider community, Mathaf Arab Museum of Modern Art is to host an online panel discussion on art and Cultural Narratives in Qatar tomorrow.

The online event is being organised in co-operation with the exhibition Lived Forward:

The exhibition curator, Lina Balksi, who is one of the most accomplished Moroccan women in the field of architecture, said that the exhibition 'Lived Forward: Mathaf' is a unique opportunity for the museum to host a series of events and programmes that will reflect the current state of Qatar's art and culture.

The exhibition will showcase a variety of works by artists from around the world, including Qatar, and will explore the challenges and opportunities facing the country's cultural landscape.

The exhibition will run from 8 September to 8 October 2023, and is scheduled to take place at Mathaf, the Arab Museum of Modern Art, in Doha.
