There are periods when patients with dementia and their caregivers need help and support. Not being able to access the healthcare services increases the burden of the family, and a huge burden of stress in Qatar,” said Dr. Chandran.

“We have a group of multi-disciplinary team of specialist health care professionals, geriatricians, gerontologic psychiatrists and trained specialized nurses, who are always ready to take the call. We get to understand the problem and help them,” he added.

While, virtual consultation has become increasingly important, there are moments when a physical consultation is essential and Home Health Care services teams from HMC and Hamad Health Care Corporation continue to be on the front lines of support.

A specialised Elderly Day Care Unit was established by Hamad Hospital, designed to provide vital services in a more age-friendly environment to help the elderly avert any accelerated decline or to manage them before they become acute.

“We need to develop the skill of this service to reduce the risk or need of an elderly person to receive any hospitalisation unless it is very necessary because the care provided in the hospitals are almost the same as the care provided to their own family,” he added.

Kuwait Amir has great stature in heart of every Qatar citizen: FM

He affirmed that the State of Qatar has always been a great friend of the people, appreciates the efforts of King Hamad bin Isa Al Khalifa and the people of of Bahrain, and the humanitarian contributions it makes, whether in Yemen or Iraq after the war. The government appreciates the humanitarian issues of concern to the Arab peoples. He pointed out that Kuwait has honorable stances towards the Palestinian issue and supports the inalienable Palestinian people to obtain their state through a just solution.

527 more recover, and 234 new virus cases reported

The Ministry of Health and Prevention’s (MOPH) announcement of 234 new confirmed cases of COVID-19 in the country. Among them 19 were imported and the remaining 215 were local cases.

The Ministry of Public Health Health (MOPH) has said that it has started inspecting processes. 23 foreign health practitioners have been detected among those who asked for licenses to practice in the health sector in Qatar. They include 17 doctors, 2 laboratory health practitioners, and two nurses. Most of the forged certificates were for specialties that are critical and in great demand in the country. In addition to circulating their names in the GCC countries, according to the following measures. Dr. Saud Al-Khalifa, the Director of the Department of Healthcare Professionals of MOPH, said: “Through our procedures, we have started to verify the validity of the certificates and documents provided by the applicants for registration and licensing are among those who wish to use the services of the profession in Qatar. We explained that verifying the authenticity of documents at a very early stage of the inspection and licensing procedures and before the involvement of any health practitioners to work in the country contribute to the early detection of fraud cases and the protection of patients, which confirm the importance of the procedures followed at MOPH to register the Department of Health Professionals as the authority to deal with the registration of health practitioners of various categories and specialities, which are received from various countries with the aim of looking for domestic work in Qatar.

The Ministry applied the established standards following for registering and licensing health practitioners in various specialties, for those who want to work in the health sector in Qatar. In a manner that guarantees the quality of health services provided in the country. The Ministry undertakes to verify the validity of scientific credentials and factual experiences.

Enthusiasts gear up for camping season

The winter camping season is a reminder of the centuries-old lifestyle and an opportunity for nature lovers to enjoy the atmosphere away from the noise of the city.

The winter camping season opens in the months of November and December. During this period, many nature lovers flock to the camping areas to enjoy the beauty of nature and the peace and quiet that comes with it.

As Qatar is distinguished by its natural places, which are suitable for camping, many residents and visitors wait for the winter camping season to enjoy camping and desert life. Cold weather and tranquility attract people, especially families, to enjoy the season. The winter camping season is a reminder of the centuries-old lifestyle and an opportunity for nature lovers to enjoy the atmosphere away from the noise of the city.

Due to the current situation, some people feared that camping will be cancelled this season as a precautionary measure to limit the spread of the coronavirus. However, there was also a group of people who believed that camping season will start as usual as people are strictly adhering to safety measures. Apart from citizens, who enjoy the winter camping season, there are also many residents who organize and make special preparations and trips on weekends to spend beautiful moments outside with their families.

In addition to recreational activities, camping also provides an important educational aspect to people as they learn about the life in the desert besides playing sports and traditional games.

The upcoming season will be a special one for most of the citizens and residents as it is a reminder of the centuries-old lifestyle and an opportunity for nature lovers to enjoy the atmosphere away from the noise of the city.

The camping season can be successful this year if the campers are obligated to take all precautionary measures and are sanitised on entry and are periodically ventilated. Meanwhile, inspection drives will be carried out by administrative staff and campers are implementing all the required measures.

With the camping season set to begin next month, many nature lovers are preparing for a memorable winter camping season. The Al Shuaa Reserve Park in Al Khor. QNL to explore mindfulness, mental health in October

Qatar National Library has announced a bumper agenda of monthly events for October. With a host of programmes designed to stimulate both the senses and remove the monotony of daily life.

On October 5, middle and high school students can join the Library online for ‘Ask A Young Adults’ Librarian’, an hour-long question and answer session hosted by a Young Adults’ Librarian, an hour-long question and answer session hosted by a Young Adults’ Librarian. The session will be an opportunity for students to ask their questions and get answers from a librarian.

On October 8, patrons can join the Library online to explore the amazing electronic collection available for younger readers on the Library's website. It's available any day of the week, any time of day, and includes audiobooks, read-alongs, games, puzzles, pranks and more.

On October 12, the Library delves into important contemporary issues by running a workshop “Preserving Your Mental Health in a Changing World”. Negative emotions can be a healthy reaction to the challenges people face, but for many, they can become a barrier to living an active, engaged, and happy life. This workshop aims to help participants identify and manage their emotions in a healthy way.

On October 15, join the Library on Microsoft Teams for ‘Explore Sustainable Development Goals Through Building Bricks’. This virtual workshop uses the Lego System Play methodology to help young people get acquainted with the UN’s Sustainable Development Goals and make meaningful connections between their daily lives and solutions to common global problems.

Also on October 16, participate in ‘The 360 Librarian: Mindfulness – Emotional Intelligence and Critical Reflection in the Workplace’. Participants can join the book’s 360 Librarian, look at the soft skills that can enhance careers, relationships, and the workplace mindset, and take participants on an interactive exploration of the practice.

Patrons can join the Library on October 19 by remembering Alia Inamgubrunra, a prominent activist, lawyer, author, andphilosopher who in 1921 became the first female member of the newly independent Republic of Bhutan and Mongolia.

From October 19 to 25, the Library will hold ‘Summit Melhoria’, an e-workshop to give the library a platform to foster discussion and contribute to important global conversations. The theme of the workshop is “Explore Sustainable Development Goals Through Building Bricks”.

Qatar wins hearts and minds

Qatar has won hearts of the world’s top athletes by delivering the final match of the Diamond League athletics competition and other track and field world events on Friday in Doha. Over a hundred leading track and field athletes competing for the greatest prizes, producing thrilling performances at the Qatar SC Stadium. The star-studded occasion was yet another clear demonstration of the comprehensive advantage and impact of the COVID-19.

Assembling so many athletes and ensuring their safety was an upscaled task, but the Qatar Athletics Federation (QAF) proved their calibre with a splendid collaboration with the Ministry of Public Health (MOH) and the Qatar Athletics Committee (QAC) - still a remarkable job in making the Doha Diamond League a blockbuster success.

Superstars including American pole vault world champion Sandi Morris, European’s World 5000 champion Helen Obiri and Jamaica’s double Olympic champion Elaine Thompson-Herah, the 100m world record holder of praise for the Qatar organizers for pulling together a successful event. Their work was remarkable in making the impossible, possible.

Thompson-Herah, currently the world’s fastest female, had called for the organizers for hosting the league a time in when many events were cancelled over safety concerns. With the successful organization of the event last weekend, Doha, which hosted the 2019 IAAF World Championships dubbed ‘the best in history’ by World Athletics President Sir Sebastian Coe, confirmed its status as leading athletics venues in the world.

Not just athletics, Qatar - host of the 2022 FIFA World Cup – is also currently staging the Asian Football Confederation (AFC) Champions League (West Zone) since the past two weeks. The league, which is currently in the knockout stage, is featuring leading continental club teams from Islamic countries, the UAE, Uzbekistan, Iran and Iraq besides host country Qatar. The match in the competition was played on 8 June 2022 FIFA World Cup versus Al Janoub Stadium and the iconic Khalifa International Stadium. Jassem Al Hamad Stadium is the other venue. AFC thanked Qatar for hosting the match and the organizing committee – with assistance from the QAC, the state’s top sports body.

With its effective safety controls implemented to facilitate a successful COVID-19 response in the world, Qatar is assuredly marching towards normalcy while taking lead from regional nations when it comes to resuming top international sporting events.

Risk mitigation key to reducing damage to cultural properties

Many of them have pared them down, assuming they are still open. But restaurants hold no appeal for me, for various reasons. What might become normal, or perhaps never normal, is how long? How long would the world have to wait to normalize? Not only do I have to worry about the impact on my wallet, but also the risk of flood damage. It is estimated that the 2019 Typhoon No. 19 flooded and about 230,000 cultural facilities located near rivers or other locations could be discarded as disaster places. It has been confirmed that they were only the fifth-ranked team in the East Asia League. Today some resta-urants hold no appeal for me, for various reasons. One feature of the Covid-19 era is how much the standard way of living is changing and doing things have been remodeled and turned upside down. The obvious question is then whether people will decide to make these new arrangements permanent or return to the old. For example, I used to go to music-themed nightclubs and regular fancy restaurants, ordering as many alcohol drinks (and no main course) and sharing them with a table of four. Many of the drinks are composed of various ingredients, can be placed on the plate and explained in lengthy detail by a friendly, well-informed server.

Today some restaurants still boldly offer no appeal to me, assuming they are still open. Many of them have pared down their menus, as social distancing within kitchens has limited what cooks can accomplish. Nor do I want a waiter to serve my drink every time it has almost run out. And since much of these places have a bar, I am also somewhat aware of some of the magic of the experience that is outside this.
The United Nations said Yemen’s war sides agreed yesterday to exchange more than 5,000 prisoners, marking the first phase of a prisoner-release deal that would see the release of more than 10,000 prisoners overall.

The UN mission in Yemen said the internationally recognized government that was driven from the capital six years ago and the Shiite rebels agreed “to immediately release a first group of 1,000 conflict-related detainees and prisoners, in accordance with the terms agreed upon.”

The deal was seen as a breakthrough during the final session in Stockholm that ended on Friday. Both parties agreed to several humanitarian measures, including a cease-fire in the strategic port city of Hodeida. Implementation of the humanitarian measures was supposed to start the following day.

The talks were interrupted by a two-hour walkout on Monday when the Houthis and the government delegation went offline. Unresolved issues included the composition of a committee to be formed to monitor the deal and the exchange of prisoners.

Marc Rabil, a China analyst at the Middle East Institute, said his recent travels by customers had "the suspicion that the city's status can never be changed for as long as any legitimate Palestinian president remains in power".

"Jerusalem is the capital and site of the main pilgrimage routes. The status of Jerusalem in the West Bank is an issue of great importance for the Palestinian people and their struggle for self-determination," he said.

"The recognition by the United States of Jerusalem as the capital of Israel has deepened the divide between Israelis and Palestinians and has undermined the prospect for a peaceful and just settlement of the conflict. The move has been widely criticized and has led to increased tensions in the region."}

South Africa's minister of finance has said his department will release its revised budget next week, as the country battles a surge in COVID-19 cases. The virus has now killed more than 12,000 people in South Africa and has pushed the economy into recession, with many businesses forced to close. The government has announced a series of measures to support businesses and individuals affected by the pandemic, including a new stimulus package and a doubling of unemployment benefits. However, critics have argued that these measures are insufficient and that more needs to be done to support the economy.

"The current situation is extremely challenging," Finance Minister Tito Mboweni said in a statement. "We have had to make difficult decisions to ensure the sustainability of the state and the economy. We are working to ensure that the necessary support is available to those who need it most."
North Korea accuses South of intruding on official’s body

South Korea's military said on Friday it had found the body of a North Korean official who was on a South Korean ship, in waters near the disputed sea boundary to the north, and would hand it over to North Korea, which has accused South Korea of sending ships across the militarised zone that has stoked tensions.

“The object identified to us during the inspection is the body of the official’s body,” South Korea’s Joint Chiefs of Staff said in a statement.

Indian farmers protest against farm bills

India’s Prime Minister Narendra Modi has approved three controversial farm bills amid nationwide protests by farmers who say the new laws will benefit big business and leave millions of poor farmers own less than 2 hectares of land.

The three laws, approved by India’s Parliament yesterday, allow farmers to sell their produce outside the regulated market and directly sell their produce to institutional buyers.

The bills remove state-run purchasing agencies from the procurement system, allowing buyers to set their own prices. They also provide safety nets for farmers in case of crop failures.

“Multiple reports said that the moves were aimed at helping big agri-businesses that pay lower prices to farmers and at encouraging them to buy crops from them at rates lower than the government’s minimum support prices (MSP), which are set annually by the government to ensure a fair return to farmers.

Complaints against the bills have been led by India’s main opposition Congress party.

“A person with knowledge of the matter told Reuters that the bills also ensured that the government could no longer make farmers accountable for crop failures, leaving them exposed to the risk of weather, pests or other factors.

Final whale saved from grim Australia mass stranding

A lone whale was rescued from among more than 300 that have been beached in western Australia, bringing the known count to 287, less than half the total stranding. The Western Australian Government said. But the authorities did not rule out the possibility of further strandings.

“The cause of the mass stranding is still under investigation,” said Dr Andrew Foote, deputy director of the Western Australia Department of Biodiversity, Conservation and the Arts.

The health department spokeswoman and the chief veterinary officer said they were too busy handling the beached whales to comment on the general state of the pods.

After two days of efforts to save the last few whales that remained stranded, the authorities said yesterday they would concentrate their efforts on the pod that remained.

Macron’s party braces for new poll setback

President Emmanuel Macron’s centrist party braced yesterday for a new setback in polls for France’s Senate upper house, where the right is expected to hold on to its majority.

French Senate members are not elected directly by voters, but instead by tens of thousands of local councillors who are themselves elected by the people. The Senate is an institution that the left has struggled to contain since its inception.

In the previous elections, the right won control of 430 seats, but the latest poll shows the right failing to hold on to its majority.

The latest poll published by BFMTV shows the right winning 420 seats, 10 short of the total needed to maintain control of the Senate.

The results are expected to bolster the position of President Emmanuel Macron and his centrist En Marche! party, but they also confirm the growing electoral difficulties faced by the right in recent months.

German town opens doors to migrants

The town of Neumarkt in Germany’s eastern state of Saxony-Anhalt has opened its doors to migrants in a bid to help integrate refugees into the local community.

The town has been working with local charities and social organizations to help refugees find housing and employment.

The mayor of Neumarkt, Christian Stöhr, said the town had a responsibility to welcome refugees and help them integrate into society.

Stöhr said the town had received more than 1,000 applications from refugees and was working to find them suitable housing and job opportunities.

The move is part of a broader effort by the German government to ease the burden on local communities struggling to accommodate the country’s high number of refugees.

The government has announced plans to increase the number of refugees allowed into the country each year, with a target of 75,000 in 2018 and 70,000 in 2019.

German economy sees uptick in confidence

The German economy is showing signs of improvement, with business sentiment rising to a three-year high in February, according to a survey released today by the Ifo Institute.

The Ifo index, which measures business sentiment in the country, rose to 104.7 in February from 103.7 in January, marking the first increase in three months.

The survey, which is based on responses from about 10,000 companies, showed that firms are more optimistic about the economic outlook and are increasing investment in new technology.

German government’s ‘super minister’ dies aged 80

Former German ‘super minister’ Wolfgang Clement, who was controversial over his role in the 2015 migrant crisis, has died at the age of 80.

Clement had been suffering from cancer and died in his sleep at home in Bonn, his spokesperson said.

He was the leader of the Christian Democratic Union (CDU), the country’s largest party.

Clement was known for his tough stance on immigration and his support for stricter measures to control the influx of migrants into Germany.

But his policies also drew criticism for their impact on the country’s already weak economy.

Clement’s death is a blow to the CDU, which is already struggling to maintain its popularity in the run-up to national elections later this year.

Clement’s successor, the new CDU leader Armin Laschet, will face the challenge of balancing the need to limit immigration with the desire to maintain Germany’s strong economy.

‘No deal’ Brexit looms as UK citizens prepare to leave EU

Britain’s European Union citizens, who are at risk of losing their rights to live and work in the EU, are preparing for a potential ‘no deal’ Brexit.

The UK’s decision to leave the EU in March 2017 has sparked a race against time for EU citizens to apply for residence permits in their host countries.

The UK government has estimated that around 5 million EU citizens live in the UK, and has made it clear that those who do not apply for residence permits will lose their rights to live and work in the UK.

The situation is particularly acute for children, who are at risk of losing their right to study in the UK.

Refugees in France seek shelter from winter blast

France saw temperatures drop to -20C overnight, with snowfall in many regions, leaving many migrants and refugees struggling to find shelter.

Local authorities and humanitarian organizations are working to provide assistance to those affected by the cold, offering food, shelter and medical care.

French police and immigration officials have also been patrolling the streets to ensure that migrants and refugees are not exposed to further dangers.

Refugees and immigrants are being asked to seek shelter at local community centers and churches, where they will be provided with food and shelter.

The government has also announced plans to increase the number of shelters available for migrants and refugees, and to provide additional resources to local authorities to help them cope with the cold weather.

The eyes don’t like worn masks: Masks upset across the planet

AP—WASHINGTON

Placing an order at a deli counter while wearing a mask and standing 6 feet away can be difficult. To teaching a class full of schoolchildren and connecting with students who are themselves wearing masks. Teachers who in ordinary times rely on their voices to convey nuances of language and manage classroom behaviour are tasked with not sounding like the trombone-produced ‘wah wah’ of the Charlie Brown TV specials while protecting themselves and their students from the new novel coronavirus.

To help themselves communi- cate with students, teachers have turned to masks with clear patches over their mouths, set up plexiglass hurdles inside classrooms so they can speak without masks, and in some cases turned to props to get across how they are feeling.

Stephanie Waltzer, a teacher who works with special education students in Fairfield County, Connecticut, uses a stick with an image of a smile during her sessions. ‘‘Try to be expressive with your eyes. We’re looking at each other, and I need to make sure they know I’m happy because you can’t see my mouth smiling,’’ she said. ‘‘So I actually have a smile on a stick, which is something children can see. ‘Look, I’m smiling.’”

She also used virtual reality for Jon Resendez, a teacher in Illinois. Calling her students, she worries about how the pandemic and its dynamic in his 12th grade class for students who are deaf and hard of hearing or whose first lan- guage is not English.
