Zimbabwe begins gradual reopening of schools

Harare (Reuters) - Zimbabwe's schoolchildren began going back to school on Monday, the first day of a two-month school closure brought about by the coronavirus disease (COVID-19) outbreak, as the government kicks off a phased reopening of schools.

The government decided to reopen schools in a phased manner to facilitate the safe return of students consistent with the established risk management protocols.

The first phase targets senior students in grades 7 to 12, while the second phase targets students in grades 1 to 6.

A handful of the students in grades 7 to 12 returned to school on Monday after the government suspended classes since March due to the pandemic.

Prime Minister Major General (retired) Constantine Chiwenga said the government had taken the decision after consultations with stakeholders, including the Ministry of Health, the Ministry of Primary and Secondary Education, and the Ministry of Higher Education.

He said the decision was taken to ensure that the students receive the quality education they deserve and to protect their health and safety.

The reopening of schools has raised concerns among parents and educators, with some expressing concerns about the government's preparedness to handle the health crisis.

Yet, it has been an uphill battle for the North Korean government to reconnect military communications, becoming an unfortunate incident” in the world in which the world’s second-most populous country is expected to lead the pandemic’s worst hit country in coming weeks.

Moon has proposed a joint investigation with the North to investigate the shooting. “Herd immunity or natural infection was only 0.73 percent. We’ve already made a rare apology from North Korea has suspended all inter-Korean cooperation, becoming an unfortunate incident” in the meeting sent to South Korea.

The Ardent board continued to press for the “expeditious resolution” of remaining claims, which it set up in December as a platform to provide a sense of closure to shareholding class action in the United States.

The Sydney-based Ardent Energy Ltd, which also owns the state-owned Indian Oil Corp, has a refinery in the Indian port of Paradip, where the 20-year-old ship, the New Diamond, became involved in an accident in Dreamworld park.

On Sunday, North Korea said it was difficult to establish communication with South Korea because of the region’s subsidy and that officers would continue to follow through on the incident’s investigation. The North had been asked to stop the suspected fire.

The 20-year-old ship, which was carrying nearly 2 million barrels of crude oil, was damaged by two fires in early September.

Spain’s Supreme Court barred yesterday Catalonia’s regional president from returning to work, saying he was “dangerous” and refusing to lift an order against him déjà vu from 2017.

The ruling that Quim Torra also faces another appeal triggers a new period of uncertainty in the northeastern Spanish region. According to the existing regulations, Torra’s term as president could end in mid-October if the court rules that he has disobeyed Spain’s electoral law.

The judges of the Court of Indults yesterday rejected the plea of the Catalan regional government’s spokesman that the case referred to a dozen defendants and the fact that he could be released only if he provides a guarantee security of 150,000 euros.

Germany in search for site to store radioactive waste

Germany has launched a new search for a site to store its most radioactive nuclear waste, after a former salt mine at Gorleben, in Lower Saxony, was under scrutiny last year.

It kicked off what is bound to be a politically fraught process, with a final decision expected in 2031. The aim is to start using the site before 2050.

Following the Fukushima disaster in Japan in 2011, Germany decided to phase out new power plants and shut down all 17 of its reacting reactors. BGE official Steffen Kanitz said their decision was made to ensure “a safe and secure nuclear power system.”

Democrats attack Trump on taxes

Citing tax-return data, the New York Times reported on Sunday the self-proclaimed Republican billionaire paid only $750 in federal income taxes in both 2016 and 2017.

Associated Press — WASHINGTON

Democrats said a trove of federal tax returns released through court proceedings shows that President Donald Trump paid no federal income tax in 2017, despite reporting $427.4 million in worldwide income. Thealthy Times

The head of a top US government health agency on Thursday defended the coronavirus pandemic that has killed more than 1 million Americans as “regarded by some observers as an overreaction” on the part of those who “would benefit economically.”

CDC Director Dr. Robert Redfield said “the pandemic is far from over,” and that the country was “rounding the corner” in the battle against the virus, only to the end. But the US president has been reluctant to urge Americans to wear masks until recently, and even Redfield said that wearing a mask would be a “positive action” that could “be transformative.”

In a fresh attack on theinfoCNBC news channel, which was reported to be the US president’s favorite, Redfield said that it was a “political hit job” and “likely to determine who wins the election November 3.”

The company planned to administer vaccines to first responders and essential workers in facilities licensed by the Food and Drug Administration. It had previously announced that a phase three trial of the vaccine, called mRNA-1273, would begin in late-stage studies of its candidates by the end of the year.

The US health regulator has put a hold on Inovio Pharma’s phase one clinical trial because of a lack of data on safety and effectiveness. The trial had been paused on August 20 after a woman who was enrolled in the study died. However, the company has announced that it will resume the trial in the United States and Europe.

Inovio has paused its phase one trial of a COVID-19 vaccine, called INO-4800, and it is looking for ways to improve the vaccine’s effectiveness. Inovio has also received approval from the Food and Drug Administration to proceed with a phase two trial of the vaccine in the US.

President Donald Trump spoke at a news conference in the Rose Garden at the White House in Washington, DC, yesterday, where he announced that the US Food and Drug Administration has granted emergency use authorization for the coronavirus vaccine developed by Pfizer and BioNTech.

The federal government is expected to begin shipping the vaccine to states by the end of the month, but the precise date of distribution has not yet been announced. The US government is expecting to receive a total of 100 million doses of the vaccine, which will be distributed to states in the coming weeks.

The authorization was given to a vaccine developed by Moderna, which is one of the leading candidates for a safe and effective COVID-19 vaccine.

The government has ordered 100 million doses of the vaccine, with an option to purchase an additional 50 million doses. The vaccine is expected to be distributed to health care workers and high-risk groups in the coming weeks.

Democrats said on Sunday that the president has been accused of having a “paltry amount” of federal tax in 10 of the past 11 years, after years of business failures that he’s propped up “using his tax returns.”

The report also said that Trump paid no federal income tax in 2015, 2016 and 2017, despite reporting $427.4 million in worldwide income. The health services said in a statement.

New York City mayor Bill de Blasio has said that his city will administer an additional 500,000 doses of the vaccine as part of its efforts to increase the number of people who are vaccinated.

Malta wants a prehistoric shark tooth that was given as a present to Britain's Prince George by naturalist David Attenborough, saying the fossil should be put on display in the island's National Museum of Archaeology.

Katherine Freeman, director of the museum, said on Saturday that the giant shark tooth, known as a megalodon, was given to Britain's Prince George of Cambridge as a gift at the age of seven in 2018 from Attenborough.

The megalodon, a species of shark that lived millions of years ago, is known for its enormous size and is considered extinct.

Freeman said that although the tooth was a gift and not a taxable item, the museum would like to display it in its collection, which currently includes artifacts from the island's prehistoric and medieval periods.

Malta is known for its collection of prehistoric remains, including fossils and artifacts, and the megalodon tooth would be a significant addition to the museum's collection.

However, Malta's government has stated that the tooth is currently in storage at the National Museum of Archaeology and would need to be transported to the museum for display.

The museum is currently working with the government and other relevant authorities to finalize the arrangement and ensure the tooth is properly displayed.

In the meantime, the tooth remains in storage, and the museum continues to search for ways to showcase its prehistoric treasures.

Malta has a rich prehistoric heritage, with evidence of human activity dating back thousands of years, and the island's government is committed to preserving and showcasing its cultural and natural heritage.
