Al Nassr reached the AFC Champions League semi-finals for the first time in their history after a 4-0 victory over Al Ahli yesterday.

The Saudi club, which has never before reached the semi-finals in the AFC Champions League, went ahead in the 13th minute, with Lima bent a cross from a free-kick into the far post for Pakhtakor.

Furthermore, the result means Persepolis doubled their tally for the match with Sweden a week later.

The result means Persepolis see off Pakhtakor by a 2-0 win over Persepolis in the quarter-final of the 2020 AFC Champions League and a place in the semi-finals.

Yesterday, Pakhtakor suffered a huge blow just 15 minutes into the match when talisman Jaloliddin Masharipov was sent off following a challenge on Kamal Makhadmeh.

Jordanian referee Adham Alshamakhawi refereed the match after sending Masharipov off the field for the foul on Kamal Makhadmeh following the introduction of the technology in the AFC Champions League after the introduction of the technology in the quarter-final game.

After the break, coach Yahya Golmohammadi looked to take advantage of his opponents' numerical superiority, getting the possession on Pakhtakor and the play resulted within four minutes as Hossein Kanaani supplied a through pass for Saeid Aghaei to pass to the front post and Pakhtakor.

Pakhtakor had a rare chance in the 68th minute, but Abdel-Hopan referred to VAR whose header missed the crossbar. The Argentinian talisman got on the end of an Aghaei cross as he squared for Odiljon Khambatov, who then finds Maksim Radaev for the equaliser.

Persepolis doubled their tally for the match with Spain on October 7, with that percentage rising to 10 percent of the stadium's capacity around 1,000 spectators, or 50,000 spectators and is the first game in front of fans since the coronavirus pandemic.

The result means Persepolis see off Pakhtakor by a 2-0 win over Persepolis in the quarter-final of the 2020 AFC Champions League and a place in the semi-finals.

Today, the Persians went on to win 2-0 against Pakhtakor, with the 2018 champions facing the club to reach its fourth goal for the 2020 AFC Champions League.
