The Ministry of Public Health (MoPH) yesterday announced the registration of 238 new confirmed COVID-19 cases. According to the Ministry, among them 15 were travellers returning from abroad.

As many as 255 people have recovered, bringing the total number of recovered cases in Qatar to 124,108. The Ministry also reported two new deaths of people aged 72 and 82, who were suffering the necessary medical care.
A survey by the Ministry of Public Health (MoPH) has found that some 23.8% of students in private schools have abnormal visual acuity.

Head of the Non-Communicable Disease Section at the MoPH, Dr. Khalid Al Matara, said that the survey was carried out by MoPH in collaboration with the Ministry of Education and Higher Education and the Primary Health Care Corporation, and included around 100,000 students from 166 government schools and 140 private schools.

An ophthalmologist at MoPH, Dr. Shadi Al Ashwal, said that Qatar conducts the survey annually, indicating that school managers should improve visual acuity and refer students who fall below vision requirements to ophthalmologists at health centres, to be examined and managed accordingly.

"It is worthy to note that 40% of the low vision causes are not correctable or uncorrected refractive errors such as myopia, hyperopia and astigmatism. Furthermore, children are more vulnerable to this disease than others because their visual system is responsible for about 80% of what they learn. Therefore, improving vision contributes to improve their academic level and skills, and prevent some complications such as lazy eye," said Dr. Al Ashwal.

MoPH joins the commemoration of the World Sight Day 2020, in alliance with "Hope in Sight" and aims to promote healthy eyes, and to provide early diagnosis and effective treatments for causes of blindness.

Prime Minister and Minister of Interior H E Sheikh Khalid bin Khalfan bin Abdullah Al Thani met today with Ambassador of the Argentine Republic, H E Carlos Alberto Hernandez, on the occasion of the end of his tenure in the country. The Prime Minister wished the envoy success in his future tasks and further progress and prosperity in the bilateral relations.
Qatar-Turkey ties best example of win-win cooperation

The 2022 World Cup requires considerable preparatory work not only to make sure the stadiums, hotels and other facilities are ready but also to ensure there are no breaches of the national laws and regulations that govern it. "There’s pressure on Qatar, there’s pressure on us," says Turkey’s President Recep Tayyip Erdogan, speaking to the editorial board of the Turkish daily newspaper, Zaman, in an interview published in the Sept. 28 edition.

Erdogan said that Turkey has taken steps to ensure that it will host the World Cup without any problems. "We have a special bond and friendship with Saudi Arabia, especially with the Custodian of the Two Holy Mosques Salman bin Abdulaziz. Thus far, we have been able to work together on many issues," he said. Erdogan also added that Turkey has been working with Saudi Arabia on the World Cup and that they will work together to ensure its success.

Qatar Scientific Club manufactures 6,000 face shields

QF welcomes two new schools into its education ecosystem

Qatar Scientific Club with the support of Oryx GTL, has started the manufacture of 6,000 pieces of medical face shields for the medical cadres of Hamad Medical Corporation (HMC) and the staff of Oryx GTL. The Club will support HMC with 3,000 pieces of medical face shield, and the staff of Oryx GTL with 1,000 pieces to help decrease the risk of infection with the coronavirus.

The face shields will be produced in the digital manufacturing laboratory (Fablab) at Qatar Scientific Club after testing and approval by Harmad Medical Corporation. The locally manufactured face shield has several features, including minimizing condensation of water vapour and blocked vision. The shield is reusable after sterilization, thus it is environmentally friendly. It has been tested by medical staff several times, taking into consideration the recommended improvements.

A soft pillow which provides a good night's sleep transforms into a poignant symbol of terrorism and hatred. The artist Ahmed Al Bahrani's latest exhibition unveiled recently at Al Markhiya Gallery at Doha Fire Station. Art, though a powerful effective medium in conveying messages, can also make human emotions feel intense, sad and rest and destroy hope in face of irresistible challenges that the world is currently trying to overcome.

The exhibition carries on Al Bahrani's artistic interest in creating work that brings more freedom to the world. His powerful visual vocabulary that can only be harrowed by talented artists like Al Bahrani. In the 25-year-old sculptures of pillows blended with powerful images such as bullets, tanks and brokenbonds. Al Bahrani juxtaposes contrasting ideas such as comfort and pain, and rest and distress brought to the public over crucial themes of war, devastation, and pain, rest and distress brought to the public over crucial themes of war, devastation, and pain.

Compelling bronze sculptures such as "Memory", which depicts the father of the nation, laid on a pillow and "The Nightmare" which depicts a broken wall emerging from the pillow are even amidst tears and hugs that a hope of all had completely re-presented Palestinian defiance. Many works of acrylic paintings titled "A Dream" seemingly depict his self-portrait restlessly sleeping far away from war and liberation from the main features of the exhibition. He integrates images like paper plates, clouds and paper boats to the monochrome paintings to denote the possibility of reaching a certain dreams considering present realities.

Born in 1945 in Babylon, Iraq, Al Bahrani has developed a lifelong interest in sculpture from a young age when he would make voluntary discoveries while modeling clay on the riverbanks of his hometown. He later followed his love of art and graduated from the Fine Arts Institute in Baghdad in 1988 and taught sculptures at the Academy of Fine Arts in Baghdad from 1992 to 1994.

After leaving Iraq in 1994 for political reasons, his work became amplified with his sense of estrangement from his geographic foundations and roots, working with specific materials to explore his sense of time.

Arriving in Qatar in 1999, he has been involved in many landmark projects in the country, transforming his medium to address modern-day life and deeper issues in a direct fashion. A collection of the artist's statues, monuments and murals can be found in different parts of the world, notably in Qatar where he has lived for quite some time. Some major works in Qatar include: "The Challenge", a series of impressive bronze sculptures depicting larger-than-life heroes, including the sky-scraper created to commemorate the 24th Men's Championship in Qatar and "A Message of Peace" to the World. His works are also displayed at the South Node passenger station at Hamad International Airport in Doha in which he honours the work of Dr. A. W. A. Abdul Malek.

Al Bahrani's works have also been exhibited internationally with presentations in Iraq, Yemen, Turkey, New York and Qatar, yet to name a few.

Qatar expresses appreciation for UNHCR efforts

Qatar’s Permanent Representative to the UN Office in Geneva, H E Ambassador Ali bin Khalfan Al Mansoori, said that Qatar is one of the most important donor countries in the world, with annual contributions reaching more than $53m, and the State of Qatar has been keen to contain many regional and international crises and conflicts.

In relation to the move, the government aims to promote a series of digital policies in a top-down fashion by the prime minister.

Under the ministerial meeting, the government will set up a special task force to formulate the data strategy and a working group to compile the basic law on the protection of personal data and information and telecommunication networks.

The government hopes to present an action plan and an international digital strategy to the United Nations Conference on Digital Government, organized by the United Nations Public Library University Prof. Jan Mural said that the working group, whose activities include private-sector experts, Mural said that the working group’s main goal is to work with industry and international organizations to make initiatives and solutions to them in accordance with the principle of sharing burdens and responsibilities.

Globalisation revised but not reversed by COVID-19

The peace deal agreement followed ten months of negotiations in Juba, South Sudan, aims at ending decades of war in which hundreds of thousands died. The peace agreement covers a number of tricky issues, from land ownership, reparations and compensation, to wealth and power sharing and the return of refugees and internally displaced people.

For many observers, the signing of the agreement between the Sudan Transitional Government and the Sudan Revolutionary Front on October 3rd in Juba, the capital of the South Sudan, represents a turning point for a country which has been suffering through several decades of war. The SIP is an alliance of nine political and armed groups from different parts of Sudan, fighting against the conflict-torn states of Blue Nile, Kordofan and the Blue Nile, North (SPLM/N) led by Abul Azal Ali, which controls parts of South Sudan. Sudan’s Sovereign Council Chief General Abdel Fattah Al Burhan, South Sudan’s President Salva Kiir and Chad President Idriss Deby Itno are seen among others as key envoys of peace agreements. The deal was signed between the Sudan Revolutionary Front and the Sudanese government to end decades-old conflict, in Juba, South Sudan on October 3, 2020.

This agreement is said to represent a hope of peace for the people in Darfur, South Kordofan, and Blue Nile, whose rights have been systematically violated by other armed groups. It also must be said to include and involve other interest groups, including internally displaced people and civil society so they too can provide solutions to the multiple challenges the country faces.

In its implementation, however, the government is said to represent a hope of peace for the people in Darfur, South Kordofan, and Blue Nile, whose rights have been systematically violated by the previous government’s policies. The importance of this landmark peace deal can also be linked to the modern history of Sudan. It has been a history of war, economic stagnation and political repression. In the 1950s, Sudan has been in a state of conflict. The country’s civil war brought its brutal war back in 1955 to 1958 and 1962. It was not until 2005 when the Comprehensive Peace Agreement (CPA) was signed, that the South Sudanese conflict finally came to an end, partially because of the efforts of the international community. Since then, the peace process in the country has continued, but it remains a long way from becoming a reality. Throughout the years following the CPA, peace and stability have been the main objectives of the international community. The CPA was signed in 2005 between the Sudanese government and the Sudan People’s Liberation Movement (SPLM/A) under the leadership of Salva Kiir. The peace agreement covers a number of tricky issues, from land ownership, reparations and compensation, to wealth and power sharing and the return of refugees and internally displaced people.

North Korea’s former acting leader, who defected to South Korea in 2001, has died of apparent suicide, South Korean media have reported.

North Korea’s state media has announced the death of the man, identified as Jo Song Gil, who was a top ranking official under the late leader Kim Jong Il.

Jo had earlier told lawmakers that he was under protection at an unspecified location outside Italy.

Korea had been known to have been asked to quarantine at their hotel.

The Indian Ocean island nation had not reported its first coronavirus case until only three weeks ago, on November 28. Since then, all the infections at the site were traced back to asymptomatic carriers.

Jo’s position has proven to be an acrobatic one, a display of scraps with Asian statesmen, the firm said in a statement on Tuesday.

South Korea’s Chololal epidemiologist, recalled on local communities to cooperate with authorities amid swift increases in the spread of the virus.

The TRE and Health and Development, both non-governmental organizations based on an asymptomatic model, found that a vaccine could be widely available in a year or two, and business leaders were supporting that plan.

The recent surveys in the region found that about 50% of those tested had antibodies to the virus.

Firefighters in New Zealand battled multiple fires in remote, rugged mountain forest on the South Island, while fire observers, on the ground, were briefly returning to their homes to check on property and some Lake Ohau residents were under threat to leave their homes.

Air New Zealand had been delivering earlier this week as they scrambled to find the source of the country’s largest outburst.

The government had long been warned to face up to the epidemic after the rate of new cases made that assumption based on an international study.

Australia considered a rollout of the vaccine in January and February, but thought the vaccine would be available in February 2021.

The government had long faced criticism for not making any vaccines available for free to Australia’s population of 26 million.

The months-long coronavirus pandemic would boost economic activity by $11.8 billion and bring the annual growth rate to 1.5 percent, he said.

But since it hit a single-day high of 986 on August 8, the country had not reached a peak in new infections since then.

The virus is spreading very fast, but there is already much uncertainty in this pandemic,” he added.

Australia has allowed for the earlier rollout of vaccines manufactured locally. But the government had been heavily criticized for not using two pharmaceutical companies to produce the vaccine.

Philippines ambassador to the UN in Geneva Evan Garcia said that unfounded reports and information could have led to a false sense of complacency, as the government had been pushing efforts to cooperate with the United Nations.

Pakistan's man's death penalty overturned in blasphemy case

A Pakistani court has overturned the 2018 conviction of a Christian man for blasphemy in a case that drew international condemnation, paving the way for his release.

Islamabad

A Pakistani Christian man has had his capital sentence overturned in a blasphemy case that sparked widespread concern and condemnation from human rights groups.

The man, who was arrested in 2013 for allegedly insulting the Prophet Muhammad, had been convicted of blasphemy and sentenced to death by a lower court. The Supreme Court quashed the conviction and ordered a retrial.

The Supreme Court, in a unanimous decision, ruled that the lower court had not established a prima facie case of blasphemy, which is a capital offense in Pakistan.

The court ordered a retrial of the case, stating that the evidence presented by the prosecution was not sufficient to establish a case of blasphemy.

The decision, announced today, is seen as a significant victory for human rights advocates who had long been calling for the reform of Pakistan's blasphemy laws.

Background

Blasphemy is a crime in Pakistan, and conviction of blasphemy can lead to capital punishment. The country's laws have been criticized for being overly strict and for fueling religious tensions.

The case involved a local Christian community leader who had been charged with insulting the Prophet Muhammad in a speech.

Repercussions

The decision is likely to have implications for the handling of other blasphemy cases in the country. Human rights groups have been calling for the reform of Pakistan's blasphemy laws, which they say are used to silence critics and intimidate dissent.

International Reaction

The decision has been welcomed by human rights groups, who have long been calling for the reform of Pakistan's blasphemy laws.

Human Rights Watch praised the decision, saying it was a step towards justice and reconciliation. The group had previously urged the Pakistani government to reform the blasphemy laws.

Future Steps

The man has not yet been released, and it is unclear when he will be freed. The retrial will likely take place in the near future.

Conclusion

The Supreme Court's decision is a significant victory for human rights in Pakistan. It is a step towards reforming the country's blasphemy laws and towards a more just and inclusive society.

The US commander-in-chief has COVID-19 and the top military official to watch the coronavirus pandemic takes a toll on the federal national security establishment of the most pressing concerns.

As COVID-19 broached the milestone of 100,000 deaths in the US, the Pentagon’s Defence Secretary was quick to warn that the US military was “on the cusp of losing control” of the virus.

In a letter to military leaders, General Mark Milley, the army chief of staff, said: “The path to victory is not simple and will take time. We must be prepared for a long struggle.”

The Pentagon leadership has been under intense scrutiny for its handling of the pandemic, with some members of Congress demanding accountability for the military’s response.

Mr Milley’s letter followed a meeting with President Donald Trump at the White House, where the President had announced a major policy shift on the pandemic, saying the US was “getting back to normal.”

In the letter, Mr Milley wrote: “We are on the cusp of losing control of the virus. This is not simple and will take time. We must be prepared for a long struggle.”

The letter went on to say that the military needed to be “fully mission capable” and that the US military had a “moral obligation” to protect the public.

The move against QAnon at Facebook was seen as a significant step towards addressing the conspiracy theory, which has gained traction in recent months.

QAnon supporters have been accused of spreading misinformation and engaging in harmful behavior, including threats and violence.

The move comes after Facebook announced it would be removing all QAnon content from its platform, as part of a broader effort to combat the spread of misinformation.

The Social Media Board of Directors, which oversees Facebook’s content policies, had identified QAnon as a “priority issue.”

In a statement, Facebook said: “We are committed to removing QAnon content from our platform to prevent the spread of harmful ideas and false information.”

The move follows similar actions taken by other social media companies, such as Twitter and YouTube, which have also taken steps to address QAnon.

The decision is part of a broader effort by Facebook to combat the spread of misinformation and promote accurate information.

The decision comes after a series of high-profile incidents involving the spread of QAnon content, including a series of mass shootings and a storming of the US Capitol earlier this year.

The move is likely to be met with resistance from QAnon supporters, who have been critical of Facebook and other social media companies for their efforts to combat the conspiracy theory.

The move could also have implications for other social media companies, which may follow Facebook’s lead in addressing QAnon.

It remains to be seen whether Facebook’s actions will be enough to address the spread of QAnon, which continues to gain traction online.

However, the move is likely to be seen as a positive step towards addressing this serious issue.
Trump seeks ways to mount campaign comeback
Trump aides say he is impatient to get back on the campaign trail and insist on debating Biden, even in Miami, but some say on Tuesday he will not participate if Trump is not virus-free.

WASHINGTON — President Donald Trump, unable to campaign in a normal way in the White House and restricted by his hospitalization, is seeking ways to put a spark back in his struggling re-election bid and get back into the Oval Office within four weeks until Election Day.

Trump has been looking for options on how to get more message out and cut into Dem- ocratic nominee Joe Biden’s stride. Gop polls show that the New York City, yesterday.

Complications abound. Trump would need to test negative twice for 24 hours and then get to the hospital, which would take time. The White House’s chief of staff, Mark Meadows, said on Tuesday that Trump was eager to get back to the White House, but he did not give a definite timeline.

Trump fails to block tax return subpoena

A federal appeals court last week rejected Donald Trump’s request to prevent Manhattan’s district attorney from getting his five years of tax returns for a criminal probe into the president and his businesses.

A three-judge panel of Appeals in Manhattan said yesterday that the matter could be stayed as an appeal to the Supreme Court was considered. The court said it would appeal to the Supreme Court if Trump prevails in a lower court.

The 2nd US Circuit Court of Appeals in Manhattan yesterday ordered a September 28 request in the federal court to go ahead.

The 2nd US Circuit Court of Appeals said its count of 40 adults who approved Trump’s handling of the coronavirus was 29, including with scepticism from many Republicans.

The latest Reuters/Ipsos poll, conducted October 2-6, found that 38% of adults approved of Trump’s handling of the pandemic, which has killed more than 200,000 people in the US, has been met with scepticism from many Republicans.

As Qatar Airways continues to navigate through its network across the globe and in the US, the airline announced yesterday it will operate four weekly flights to San Francisco – the fifth new destination launched by the national carrier since the start of the pandemic – from Saturday, 15 December.

The San Francisco service will be operated by Qatar Airways’ state-of-the-art Airbus A350-900 featuring 36 seats in the award-winning Business Class and 247 seats in Economy Class with passengers flying out of Super Wis-Fi Broadband Internet until January 2022.

The Worlds Best Airlines, and the only Middle East carrier operating to San Francisco, has continued to grow and innovate during the pandemic with industry-leading flexible booking policies, rigorous cleaning measures, and a dependable network, all while adapting to an ever-changing travel landscape.

Qatar Airways Group Chief Executive, H.E. Akbar Al Baker, said: “We are thrilled to welcome San Francisco as our newest destination and our ninth current gateway to the US. As we navigate the crisis, we have made it our priority to not only reinstate our routes but to also grow our network and increase connectivity with new and relevant destinations for our customers to step-on. As the gateway to Silicon Valley and the vibrant tech economy, the San Francisco Bay Area is a globally important destination, both from a business and leisure perspective. People and families of business partners overseas often use Qatar Airways in order to visit friends, families or business partners overseas. Qatar Airways is perfectly positioned as the reliable airline partner to enable traffic in and out of the area.

We are excited as we launch this new destination making it easier for our passengers to reunite with their loved ones, having taken more than 200,000 Americans home to the US since the start of the pandemic.”

Mayor of San Francisco, London Breed, said: “On behalf of the City and County of San Francisco, I’m proud to welcome Qatar Airways to San Francisco International Airport as they initiate their new service. As we continue to navigate through the pandemic, I’m proud to welcome the return of Qatar Airways to San Francisco International Airport, as they continue to offer our passengers a route to San Francisco as our newest destination to travellers from our network.”

The addition of flights to San Francisco will add a new route to the Qatar Airways Cargo network, bringing its total of US destinations to 11.

Katara Hospitality has put in place a comprehensive integrated approach to workplace safety, building on our established infrastructure for addressing workplace-related issues to the environment, community and workplaces.

Katara Hospitality has received its Safety Excellence Award, which highlights the company’s continued progress and development. The awards ceremony was held under the supervision of the Ministry of Municipality and Environment and in cooperation with the Assistant Undersecretary for Services Affairs at the Ministry of Municipality and Environment, Mr. Nasser Al Saad.

It included an awards ceremony to recognise companies that implemented the best occupational safety standards. In addition, safety awards were presented to companies in various categories: small and medium enterprises, real estate, oil and gas, retail and health sector organisations.

The awards ceremony was one of the major attractions of the event. Excellence awards were delivered to local companies that implemented the health and safety principles over the years. The event was held under the supervision of the Ministry of Municipality and Environment and in cooperation with the Assistant Undersecretary for Services Affairs at the Ministry of Municipality and Environment, Mr. Nasser Al Saad.
