The National Sport Day Committee announced the amendment of the conditions and guidelines for the activities and sporting events of the 2021 National Sport Day on Tuesday, after coordination with the Ministry of Public Health.

Based on the decisions of the Council of Ministers issued on Wednesday, regarding the plan to ease restrictions due to the COVID-19 pandemic in the State of Qatar, it is prohibited to violate community safety, which was decided that all sports activities this year will be individual only, such as running, swimming, and cycling, the committee said in a statement.

It added that all sports that require physical contact, such as handballs, are not allowed, and sports in which several teams compete in a limited space are not permitted, in addition to not allowing public attendance in places during Sport Day. All sports activities must take place in outdoor places, while indoor sports are prohibited; in addition to not allowing the holding of sports events in schools and labs, the statement added.

The National Sport Day Committee called on all members of the community who practice sports to commit to taking several preventive measures, such as wearing masks, except for the time of meals, such as wearing masks, except for the time of meals, while in sports activities that are limited in space are not permitted, in addition to not allowing public attendance in places during Sport Day. All sports activities must take place in outdoor places, while indoor sports are prohibited; in addition to not allowing the holding of sports events in schools and labs, the statement added.

The committee urged the non-immune groups, including people who are 60 years of age or older, people with chronic disease, to be discouraged from attending places of sports activities for the sake of their safety, indicating that providing meals in all public places is under the guidelines of the Ministry of Public Health and restrictions imposed on restaurants.

Erdogan rebuffs criticism, vows ‘no mercy’ to protesters

Turkey's President Recep Tayyip Erdogan rebuffed criticism on Wednesday and vowed 'no mercy' to protesters who see his rule as an era of social isolation and economic stagnation.

Erdogan, in a speech at his ruling party's headquarters in Istanbul, said recent protests were a ‘violation of property’ and vowed to take ‘all necessary measures’ to maintain order.

‘We won't show mercy towards those who have become the toy of those who seek to terrorize the streets,' Erdogan said. ‘Our police are in their ranks and will bring them to justice.'

The protests, which broke out after Sunday's failed coup attempt, have been the biggest Erdogan has faced since seizing power in 2013.

Erdogan said his regime would have no problem in dealing with protesters, who he said were trying to disrupt the 'normal course of everyday life.'

‘There are no opponents to our government,' Erdogan said.

In a separate development, several protesters were reportedly arrested by Turkish police during a demonstration in Istanbul.

‘The police have arrested those who violated property law and are preventing the protests from spreading,' Erdogan said.

Erdogan also said his government would continue to use force to quell any protests that violate the law.

‘We will deal positively with all initiatives,' he said.

Erdogan also said his government would continue to use force to quell any protests that violate the law.

‘We need to focus on violent demonstrations,' he said.

Speaking to reporters after the meeting, Erdogan said he would call for a meeting of regional leaders to discuss the situation.

‘We will not show mercy towards those who have become the toy of organizations involved in terror and elements of the opposition,' Erdogan said.

‘We will not show mercy towards the justice of organizations involved in terror and those who have become the toy of organizations involved in terror,' Erdogan said.

‘I will say this to America: aren't you ashamed of the incidents in America?' Erdogan asked.

Libyan rival factions agree on new interim government

MONEY/GETTY IMAGES

The UN-backed government in Tripoli has signed a power-sharing agreement with Haftar's forces in the east, ending a decade of civil war. The agreement is the result of months of negotiations and a landmark decision by the UN to accept the proposal. The deal was signed on 20 June at a ceremony in Geneva, Switzerland.

The agreement includes a cabinet reshuffle, the appointment of a new prime minister, and the establishment of a transitional government. The cabinet will be composed of members from both the west and the east, and the prime minister will be chosen from among them. The agreement also includes a roadmap for elections within six months, and a permanent constitutional commission.

The UN has welcomed the agreement as a significant step towards peace and stability in Libya. The UN Secretary-General Guterres said, "This agreement is a historic moment for Libya and the region. It is a step towards ending the contest for power and towards a peaceful, democratic future."
Protests against Indian government continue amid agricultural law protests

Teachers and students in Myanmar continued to hold protests today against the coup, with the ministry of education confirming that they were still on strike. The ministry announced that it would not reopen schools until the government accepted the protesters’ demands.

The US military has announced that it will send 50% of its personnel to the region to support the protesters, who have been calling for a return to civilian rule.

The opposition Democratic National League has issued a statement calling on the military to stop its violence against protesters, and to allow the protesters to participate in the process of returning power to civilians.

The coup leader, Senior Gen. Min Aung Hlaing, has said that the military will not back down, and that it will continue to use force to maintain order.

Protests against Indian government continue amid agricultural law protests

Indian authorities have announced that they will open new opportunities to attract foreign investment, providing a boost to the country’s economy.

The government has also announced that it will provide support to farmers, who have been protesting against new agricultural laws.

Meanwhile, the United States has announced that it will ban exports of six walkie-talkies to China following inspections of the vessels.

The move is expected to be approved in a timely manner, which is beneficial for India's security and military preparedness.

Germany ducks Taiwan appeal for COVID-19 vaccine supply

REUTERS — BERLIN

Germany yesterday declined an appeal from the Taiwan government to supply COVID-19 vaccines, as the German foreign minister criticized Beijing’s decision to step up pressure on the island.

Though German industry relies on Taiwan as an export market, the likes of Volkswagen, Siemens and Infineon, Germany is its largest trading partner and a big export market for its cars.

An anonymous state news conference where the German foreign minister suggested this week that a “little bit” of trade was the “price” the country paid for normalizing relations with Beijing.

A person familiar with dis- cussions between Chinese and German governments said the talks were “very tricky” as worries over the exports of vaccines that remain in short supply at home.

Germany ducks Taiwan appeal for COVID-19 vaccine supply

REUTERS — BERLIN

Germany yesterday declined an appeal from the Taiwan government to supply COVID-19 vaccines, as the German foreign minister criticized Beijing’s decision to step up pressure on the island.

Though German industry relies on Taiwan as an export market, the likes of Volkswagen, Siemens and Infineon, Germany is its largest trading partner and a big export market for its cars.

An anonymous state news conference where the German foreign minister suggested this week that a “little bit” of trade was the “price” the country paid for normalizing relations with Beijing.

A person familiar with dis- cussions between Chinese and German governments said the talks were “very tricky” as worries over the exports of vaccines that remain in short supply at home.

Twenty-four activists appeared in a Hong Kong court yesterday on charges related to a June 4 vigil last year marking the anniver- sary of China’s military crackdown on pro-democracy protesters in and around Tiananmen Square in 1989.

Hong Kong traditional holds the largest vigil in the world every year, although it was banned in 2020, with authorities giving the risk of spreading the coronaviruses as the right to make a “necessary sacrifice.”

We, the Palestinians, are stuck in limbo

A demonstrator holding a banner and a Palestinian flag during a protest against Israeli settlers, in Beit Jala, the Israeli-occupied West Bank.

The Palestinian struggle for self-determination and freedom remains at a standstill. The international community, including the United Nations, has failed to uphold its responsibilities and to pressure Israel to end its occupation and implement international law. The Palestinian people, living under the Israeli occupation, are facing a dire humanitarian crisis, with limited access to basic services such as healthcare, education, and water.

We, the Palestinians, are stuck in limbo

It’s encouraging that reducing child poverty is now a bipartisan aspiration

The United States has gone a long way in reducing child poverty in the past few decades, with the help of various policies and programs. However, there are still many children living in poverty, and the pandemic has only made the situation worse.

It is not good enough to acknowledge that Israel is an apartheid regime but also praise it for its "successful vaccination drive" or "dramatic achievements". Until the international community stops hypocrisy and starts holding Israel accountable for its actions, we, the Palestinians, will remain stuck in limbo.

Supporting development strategy

In a bid to realise Qatar National Vision 2030, the Ministry of Transport and Communications (MoTC) signed an MoU with the Public Works Authority (Ashghal) on planning, designing, and implementing road projects, including road rehabilitation, traffic management, and pedestrian facilities.

This is part of Qatar’s efforts to improve its road network and traffic management. The MoTC and Ashghal are working together to implement a number of projects aimed at improving road safety, reducing traffic congestion, and enhancing the overall travel experience for Qatar’s residents and visitors.

The MoTC has already initiated a number of projects to improve road infrastructure in Qatar, including the National Road Network Project, which aims to upgrade and expand the country’s road network to meet the needs of transportation demand.

The MoTC is also working on developing a comprehensive traffic management plan to ensure safe and efficient traffic flow on Qatar’s roads. This includes the implementation of advanced traffic management systems, such as traffic lights, smart parking, and real-time traffic monitoring.

Moreover, the MoTC is collaborating with other government agencies and international organizations to improve road safety and traffic management in Qatar.

The MoTC is committed to providing safe and efficient transportation services to Qatar’s residents and visitors, and to supporting the country’s economic development and growth.

The MoTC is working on several initiatives to improve road safety and traffic management in Qatar, including:

- Developing a comprehensive traffic management plan
- Implementing advanced traffic management systems
- Collaborating with other government agencies and international organizations
- Providing safe and efficient transportation services

British will place travellers arriving from COVID-19 hot spots in quarantine for 10 days, after the failure of an initial 14-day plan. The quarantine will apply to 36 countries, including South Africa and countries in South America. The aim is to stop new strains of the coronavirus from spreading, but it will not apply to EU citizens who have been vaccinated.

Prime Minister Boris Johnson announced the plan on Monday and said the new measures were necessary due to the "extraordinarily fast" spread of the new variant. He said the new measures were a "no-brainer" given the risk of new variants and the urgent need to get vaccinations rolled out.

Johnson also announced that a new tiered system of Covid alerts would be introduced, with different rules applying to areas with low and high rates of transmission.

The new measures will come into force on February 15, the same day as the introduction of the new tiered system. The government has said it will review the measures every three months to ensure they are still necessary.

The European Commission has proposed a new plan to help member states deal with the coronavirus pandemic, including a framework for the sharing of vaccines and a mechanism to ensure that member states are not left behind.

The proposal, which was presented by the European Commission on Monday, would give the EU a stronger role in coordinating the vaccine rollout across the bloc, and would also provide a framework for the sharing of vaccines with countries outside the EU.

The commission has proposed a "vaccine solidarity fund" to help member states with their vaccine procurement, and a mechanism for the sharing of vaccines with countries in need.

The proposal also includes a "vaccine certificate system" to facilitate travel for vaccinated individuals across the EU.

Scottish voters now back independence: Surveys

Scottish voters, who rejected secession in 2014, are now frustrated by being taken out of the European Union against their will. John Swinney, the Deputy First Minister, said that the poll indicated that "the people of Scotland are clearly ready to take back control of their own destiny." The survey, conducted by the Scottish National Party (SNP), found that 55% of respondents supported a second independence referendum, with 40% opposed and 5% undecided.

UN chief names Michael Bloomberg climate envoy to rally action

Michael Bloomberg, who has won multiple awards for his climate change work, has been named by UN Secretary-General Antonio Guterres as the UN’s special envoy for climate action. Bloomberg, a billionaire philanthropist and former New York City mayor, is expected to use his influence to help rally support for climate action, particularly in countries that have yet to make significant progress. The announcement follows a series of climate change summits in recent months, including the COP26 conference in Glasgow, Scotland.

Impediment: Trump rejects call to testify at his trial

Former President Donald Trump's lawyers on Thursday rejected the request from House Democrats to testify at his impeachment trial in the US Senate next week, dismissing their invitation as a "political stunt." The lawyers, who said they would not testify without a court order, are representing the president in the ongoing legal battle. The Trump administration has been stripped of its subpoena power by the US Supreme Court.

Ecuador poll comeback

Ecuadorian presidential candidates Fritsch and Mena have entered the closing months of the campaign, amid concerns of potential fraud and corruption. The two candidates, who are running against each other in the second round of the presidential election, have faced criticism for their past ties to the oil industry and the government's handling of the COVID-19 pandemic. The election is scheduled for February 7, and the winner will take office in May.

Several years ago, a US Senate committee on the Space, Science, and Competitiveness Subcommittee did a study on the US space industry. They found that the US space industry was highly competitive and innovative, with a large number of companies and startups entering the market. The committee was particularly impressed by the role of venture capital in funding the space industry, and they recommended that the government continue to support this sector.

The committee also noted that the US space industry was facing challenges, including competition from other countries, such as China. However, they believed that the US had a clear advantage in terms of technology and innovation, and that it was well positioned to maintain its leadership in the space sector.

Despite the challenges, the committee was optimistic about the future of the US space industry. They believed that continued government support and investment would be necessary to maintain the country's leadership position in the space sector.

In conclusion, the US Senate committee recommended that the government continue to support the space industry through policies that encourage innovation and competition, and that it work with other countries to ensure a stable and prosperous space sector.
