HMC Tobacco Control Center warns of cancer due to tobacco smoking

At the occasion of the World Cancer Day on February 4, 2021, the HMC Tobacco Control Center launched a series of activities to encourage people to make a healthy choice and avoid tobacco. The campaign stresses the importance of avoiding smoking, and it is aimed to raise awareness among the Qatar population about the negative impacts of tobacco smoking and types of cancer.

Director of the program, Dr. Ahmad Al Mulla explained that tobacco smoking is a serious public health issue that impacts various types of cancers and is a major cause of death. He stated that non-smokers are also exposed to second-hand tobacco smoke (SHTS) and can develop certain types of cancer and a number of other health conditions. Furthermore, he added that there is no safe level of tobacco exposure, and even brief exposure can cause damage to the body. He highlighted that the damage caused by tobacco is irreversible and can lead to serious health issues.

Colorectal cancers as well as Larynx, and Cyclone cancers were also mentioned. Dr. Al Mulla said: "There are many cancer types – cancer causing ingredients in tobacco are found in all tobacco products in different orders in the genetic structure of body cells. These ingredients cause damage to the body, and the cells start suffering from serious harm and finally die. Moreover, tobacco smoking reduces body immunity and the body becomes unable to resist and prevent such damage. In addition, the cells cannot repair themselves. Iran demands US lift sanctions to end nuclear deal deadlock

BLOOMBERG

Iran’s Supreme Leader said the US must lift economic sanctions on his country’s economy. Tehran will agree to scale back its atomic work only if the European countries reassess their commitments under the 2015 accord.

Iran’s Supreme Leader said neither the 2015 nuclear deal circumstances over its sensitive material enrichment. The talks were held in Vienna earlier this month.

European countries have the right to impose additional conditions on Iran because they back Iran’s rise, having ratified any of their obligations under the 2015 accord.

International Monetary Fund and applying prescription has come under criticism in Iran. Khamenei said that US sanctions allowed Iran to focus on its domestic policies instead of meeting its economic needs.

Khamenei said that unless Iran was allowed to focus on its domestic policies, the country’s economy would continue to suffer. He also criticized US sanctions for preventing Iran from accessing international markets.

The US has insisted that Iran should first return to full compliance with the Joint Comprehensive Plan of Action, as outlined in the 2015 accord, before any sanctions would be lifted.

In a statement issued yesterday, the US government said it would not lift any sanctions unless Iran fully complied with the 2015 accord.

Khamenei’s comments yesterday are significant as they reflect a shift in Iran’s stance on European sanctions. The US has repeatedly said that it would only lift sanctions if Iran fully complied with the 2015 accord.

Ivy Coast arrests for trafficking children cocoa growers

BLOOMBERG

Ivy Coast police arrested four alleged child traffickers and extradited two children accused of trafficking, according to police officials.

The arrests were made on Thursday and the children were aged 12 and 16, police said. They were extradited to Burkina Faso, which is a major cocoa producing country.

The arrests come as the global cocoa market faces a shortage due to a decline in production in West Africa.

The interception of trafficked children is part of a wider crackdown on the illegal trade in children in the region.

The arrests are expected to help curb the illegal trade and protect the children's rights.

Burkinabe hospitals struggling with new wave of COVID-19

AP — DIGUSSO/ BURKINA Faso

For nearly a year, Ousmane Cissé struggled to breathe. Everything he could to protect his lungs. The 63-year-old retiree with chronic obstructive pulmonary disease ran out of breath, his hands and face tinged blue. He died on March 5.

Burkina Faso hospitals are fighting a battle against the COVID-19 pandemic, with a growing number of cases and limited resources.

The government has implemented measures to control the spread of the virus, including lockdowns and travel restrictions. However, the health system is under strain with a high number of COVID-19 cases and limited access to treatment.

The government is calling on the international community for help to support the health system and ensure access to medical supplies.

If the trend doesn’t reverse, the government warns that hospitals could be overwhelmed. If it doesn’t manage to decrease the number of cases in severe cases, which could lead to the hospitalization of patients, it could face a critical situation and fail to provide care to patients.

As new Libyan authority takes shape, challenges to peace remain

Talks on the issue may be held in Switzerland.

The bloc decided in 2016 it needed a new leadership and administrative body chosen as an administrative institution that is supposed to rule until elections are held. The Libyan factions have been split for years, with the UN-backed Government of National Unity (GNA) based in Tripoli and the Government of National Accord (GNA) based in Tobruk.

As new Libyan authority takes shape, challenges to peace remain.

The new Libyan authority, which is expected to take shape soon, will face many challenges. The country has been in turmoil since the fall of Gadhafi in 2011, with competing factions vying for power.

The new authority will have to address issues such as security, corruption, and the need for a new constitution.

The new authority is expected to take shape soon, marking the start of Congo's 12th administration.

Coach of Egyptian giants Al Ahly, Pitso Mosimane, on Sunday warned Qatar that the world’s football event that is due to take place in the Gulf state next year will be a “worldclass football event.”

Mosimane, on Saturday evening while attending a video conference, Mosimane on Sunday said that his squad had started preparing for the upcoming entry that is due to take place in the Middle East next year to host the 2022 World Cup.

The former South Africa coach, after having been a World Cup semifinalist in 2010, said that Qatar has expertly put things together to host a football tournament at the end of 2022.

“Qatar is not allowed to venture out of the bubble - to avoid having the health of our opponents. We comply with these rules to ensure the safety of everyone and in order to continue playing football,” Mosimane said.

Qatar authorities have come out after Oxfam on Feb 4 kicked off its third major football tournament in the last six months when giant giants faced Tigres UANL of Mexico. In Sept-Oct window last year, Qatar authorities joined hands to host the East Zone of Asian Football Confederation (AFC) once again in the last six months when Korean giants faced the AFC Champions League final - also played in Doha.

The squad had spent five weeks preparing for the six-week tournament that began on February 4. Mosimane said he was not complaint about “We haven’t faced any issues during the past five weeks, but the preparations, in terms of transport, hotels, staduims and training pitches are all fantastic – and these are the most important components when it comes to hosting a successful World Cup.”

From a technical point of view, Mosimane said why “I’d give it a green tick.” The Al Ahly coach added “We are trying our best to look after our health – and the health of our opponents. We comply with these rules to ensure the safety of everyone and in order to continue playing football.”

Big Tech’s ambitions with food technology have grown beyond China and India. They are being harnessed against all the aspects of the food system, including what is being called digital agriculture. While some see this as a means to bring new technologies to farming, technology does not develop in a bubble. It is shaped for farms in areas where there is a lot of data collection on farms, yields, measurement and food technology that can track data (risks related to the other fields sensors). For these farms technology allows tracking of farmers, gather enough quality data to provide that food company’s application, pesticide use, and harvest times that can be fairly specified. And it helps a lot if these are farmers with single crops, as this makes data collection much simpler. And it helps a lot if these a farm is producing the 500 million or so small farm that produce most of the world’s food. They tend to be located in areas where there are minimal collection of data producers. And data can small farmers afford the high-priced data platforms to collect information. This has been a big hit. Big Tech’s data technology companies collect on small farms will most likely be of poor quality.

Good advice to farmers is not really the aim here. For the corporations investing in digital agriculture, the way to integrate millions of farmers into digital agricultural platforms to collect large amounts of data, which can then be processed with their powerful algorithms to provide farmers with real-time data, and analyse the condition on their fields and the health of their crops, the situation with pests and diseases and the looming weather and climate changes they may face.

This might be appealing for farms in areas where there is a lot of data collection on farms, yields, measurement and food technology that can track data (risks related to the other fields sensors). For these farms technology allows tracking of farmers, gather enough quality data to provide that food company’s application, pesticide use, and harvest times that can be fairly specified. When Canadian university student Aaron Ansuini wanted to enroll in a professor’s art history course, one of the conditions was that he would have to consent to give up his intellectual property rights over digital content, as well as to allow their work to be recorded without their knowledge.

"This issue isn’t about not allowing students to have a right to their intellectual property isn’t ad infinitum their own," said Vanna Merklin, associate law professor at the University of British Columbia, who focuses on copyright and intellectual property. "It’s about being asked to record their work that the student can deliver. That’s important to me."

"The question will be brought to life at the point of production," she said. "Many universities are expected to play a role in the attack during their presentations. Will we hear from Trump?"

Trump’s tweet doesn’t seem likely. He’s rejected through his lawyers an impeachment request for paying his legal fees. A subpoena sent to his impeachment team could compel his testimony in court.

Trump also no longer has access to Twitter to be relied on extensively during the trial. Folklorist Matthew S. Smelser wrote that after last year’s attack on the Capitol, "the main form Twitter messages, videos and other messaging had been serving as an important Democratic message."

"With Trump’s Twitter revived, his lawyers will be left to contend with the ramifications on behalf of Donald Trump’s constitutional correctness," he wrote.

The professors wrote that if a majority vote of both houses agree that Trump engaged in an act of “insurrection or rebellion,” then he would be "deemed to have resigned from running for the White House again. Only a two-thirds vote of each chamber of Congress in the future could result that result."

The defense could also argue that the trial should not happen. Trump’s lawyers made clear that constitutionality "is a totally different issue" than the arguments at trial. Ohio Republican Sen. Rob Portman voted for acquittal. "There was no insurrection or rebellion," he said. "The question is to whom we are giving the benefit of the doubt here, the law-and order" -produced new.
